PREFACE.

THE object of this book is to bring together within the compass of a single volume the records of the officers of the army now living. It differs from any existing book containing officers' records in that it embraces all living officers, whether graduates of the Military Academy, or appointees from the ranks, or from civil life; and also in being complete in one volume. The original intention of the publishers was to have the records as full and explicit as to all the details of the services of the officers represented as it was possible to make them, with due regard to the space available. This of course involved co-operation on the part of the officers themselves, and to that end the publishers made earnest effort, by means of circulars and advertisements, to secure from every officer in the army the facts of his record as he wished it presented. Many officers responded, but many did not, and what the book lacks in respect of fullness as to details is attributable to this failure on the part of a large number of officers to respond to the often repeated solicitation of the publishers. The thanks of the publishers are due to Colonel Guy V. Henry, U.S.A., for voluntarily placing at their service his valuable book of "Civilian Appointments," and to Captain Geo. F. Price, 5th Cavalry, for similarly giving them the use of his interesting work, "Across the Continent with the Fifth Cavalry," both of which have been freely availed of. They also tender their thanks to General Horatio G. Wright, chief of engineers, and to General Godfrey Weitzel, of the same corps, General S. B. Holabird, quartermaster-general, General Stephen V. Benet, chief of ordnance, Colonel M. I. Ludington, Major W. B. Hughes, and Captain John L. Clem, of the quartermaster's department, Colonel S. C. Lyford, of the ordnance, and to Colonel John B. Nicholson, recorder of the grand commandery of the military order of the Loyal Legion, for favors and assistance received. They also desire to make acknowledgment for assistance derived from the use of Major Wilhelm's "Military and Naval Encyclopædia."

Nov. 1861, and commanded the militia of Missouri from that date to the spring of 1862, when he was placed in command of the Dept. of Missouri. He resigned this position in September, but assumed it again in May, 1863, with the rank of maj.-gen. The forces under his command operated with success in Arkansas after the capture of Vicksburg, and took Little Rock. In Feb. 1864, Schofield was appointed commander of the Army of the Ohio. He contributed to the success of Sherman's brilliant campaign, which resulted in the capture of Atlanta. About the end of Oct. 1864, he was sent with the 23d Corps to Chattanooga, with orders to report to Gen. Thomas at Nashville. He commanded at the battle of Franklin, where he was attacked by Hood on Nov. 30, and, having repulsed the enemy, fell back towards

Nashville during the night. In this action Hood lost 1750 killed and 3800 wounded; the entire loss of the Union army was 2300. This campaign was ended by the decisive victory gained by Gen. Thomas near Nashville on Dec. 15-16. Com. as brig.-gen. U.S.A. Nov. 30, 1864, and bvt. as maj.-gen. U.S.A. March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services in the battle of Franklin, Tenn. In Feb. 1865, the State of North Carolina was constituted a military department, of which Gen. Schofield was appointed commander, with instructions to co-operate with Gen. Sherman. He captured Fort Anderson, occupied Wilmington on Feb. 22, and formed a junction with Gen. Sherman at Goldsboro'. In the spring of 1867 he was appointed commander of the 1st Mil. Dist., which comprised the State of Virginia. He became Secretary of War in May, 1868, but resigned in March, 1869, and was then promoted to be maj.-gen. of the regular army, and assigned to command the Dept. of the Missouri. He became commander of the Mil. Div. of the Pacific. Appointed superintendent of the M. A. at West Point July, 1876, where he remained until Jan. 21, 1881, when he was ordered to command the Mil. Top. Engineers March 3, 1853; survey duty 1853-59; com. as capt. Top. Engineers July 1, 1856. Appointed brig.-gen. vols. May 17, 1861, he held important commands in Missouri, and in Dec. 1861, surprised a Confederate camp at Milford, which he captured with large supplies, thus forcing the Confederate Gen. Price to S. E. Missouri; following up his success, now in command of the Army of the Mississippi, in co-operation with Admiral Foote, New Madrid was taken (March 14, 1862). Promoted to be maj.-gen. March 21, 1862, and a month later (April 8) captured Island No. 10 in Mississippi River, with upward of 6500 prisoners and about 125 cannon and 7000 small-arms. Uniting with the combined armies under Gen. Halleck, he participated in the advance upon Corinth, and upon the evacuation of that place (May 30) pursued the Confederate army as far as Baldwin. Called to the East in June, he was made a brig.-gen. in the regular army (July 14, 1862) and placed in command of the Army of Virginia, comprising the forces of Fremont, McDowell, and Banks, to which were added those of the Army of the Potomac arriving from the Peninsula of Virginia. The unsuccessful battle of Bull Run was fought Aug. 29-30, and the next day (Sept. 1) that of Chantilly; a few days later Pope resigned his command, and resumed command of the Dept. of the Northwest. Since the war he has commanded various military divisions and departments, and is now (1883) in command of the Mil. Dept. of the Pacific. Com. as maj.-gen. U.S.A. Oct. 26, 1882.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE COLUMBIA,
PORTLAND, OREGON, Dec. 21, 1879.
TO THE ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL,
Military Division of the Pacific,

San Francisco, Cal.

SIR,—I wish to make special mention of the following officers who served under my command during the late expedition against hostile Nez Percés:

* * * * *

1st Lieut. Charles F. Humphrey, 4th Artillery. He commanded Co. "E," 4th Artillery, at the battle of the Clear Water on the 11th of July, and Company "A" on the 12th of July. His battalion commander says of him,—He exposed himself on so many occasions that I will not attempt to enumerate them. A hint to him was sufficient, no matter what the danger. He and his company were the most exposed of any of the battalion. Nothing daunted him. Throughout the campaign he continued to display his soldierly qualities.

* * * * *

Very respectfully your obdt. servt.,

(Signed) O. O. HOWARD,
Brig.-Gen'l, U.S.A., Com'dg Dept. of Columbia.

C., and charged also with sanitary condition of District of Columbia; March and April, '62, opened "Judiciary Square," "Carver Bk's," and "Meridian Hill" General Hospitals, beside other accommodations for sick and wounded of Army of Potomac; June 2d, '62, took possession of the Naval Academy as an army general hospital, leaving Surgeon Burton Randall, U.S.A., in charge; later in the same month assumed control of all hospital transports in the service of civil commissions and State agents, and organized them into a fleet, to ply between the Army of the Potomac and Northern hospitals, co-operating with the Sanitary Commission, and assigned Asst. Surgeon E. S. Dunster in charge of the whole; among the last to evacuate "White House Landing"; the Secretary of War presented him to the President and cabinet to estimate the loss of army supplies on that occasion; his moderate statement was received by Mr. Lincoln with expressions of joy, instead of the startling and extravagant reports he had received; with a steamer loaded down with medical stores, stimulants, fruits, and comforts he reached Harrison's Landing as the Army of the Potomac was arriving on James River; this cargo was the second full allowance he had added to the regular medical supplies of that force during June, '62, on account of emergencies, and it is believed that these large expenditures were the basis of some of the charges that were preferred against Surgeon-General W. A. Hammond; July and Aug. '62, inspected the Army of Virginia, and aided in the care of the sick and wounded, their supplies and transportation, till it fell back on the defenses of Washington; after Second "Bull Run," remaining with the disabled, he organized hospitals in Centreville for the Union and Confederates, attended to paroling Federal prisoners, and sent off all the Union disabled through the lines northward; Sept. 18, '62, the day following the battle of Antietam, he arrived on the field with a corps of civil volunteer surgeons, medical supplies, etc., and distributed them as needed, co-operating with the Sanitary Commission; December 1862, took surgeons and medical supplies to Fredericksburg, Virginia; after the battle there, organized hospitals and cared for the transportation of the sick and wounded; Jan. 20, '63, was assigned as the medical inspector of the Army of the Potomac, and beside, he inspected general hospitals in District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland, and Penna.; March 8, '63, Congress legalized his project charging medical officers with supervision of cooking as a sanitary duty; enlisting two colored cooks to a company and adding black pepper to the ration; the item of tobacco he got allowed Oct. 3, '65; March, '63, inspected Maj.-General Grant's army, and the hospitals and purveying depots of the West, and introduced into Grant's force at "Young's Point," La., the better methods of medical administration, supplies and transportation, etc., etc., of the disabled that had been developed in the Army of the Potomac; May, '63, member of a board for drawing up regulations and instructions for medical officers upon army cooking; July, '63, assigned as medical inspector of general hospitals, Dept. of Washington; July 7, '63, ordered to Gettysburg, Penna., in connection with transportation of the disabled, and sent off 15,425 Union and Confederates to the Northern hospitals; was aided by the Sanitary Commission; Oct. 1, '63, ordered to report to Major-General Rosecrans as medical inspector of the Department of the Cumberland; Nov. 11, '63, ordered to report to Maj.-Gen. Grant, inspecting in the Department of the Cumberland; at the battles of "Chattanooga," "Orchard Knob," and "Lookout Mountain," aided in the field and in hospitals; April 13, '64, assigned as medical inspector of Dept. of Arkansas; April 30, '64, ordered to look after the wounded of Maj.-Gen. Banks's army from Red River expedition; organized hospital steamers and forwarded the disabled to general hospitals; May 7, '64, Dept. of the Gulf was added to his field of inspection; July 14, '64, assigned to staff of Maj.-Gen. Canby, as medical inspector and chief medical officer, and charged with the supervision and direction of the medical department of the Military Division of West Mississippi, and the posts on the eastern bank of the Mississippi, headquarters at New Orleans; October 31, '65, honorably mustered out of service as medical inspector with the rank of lt.-colonel, and restored to his place as surgeon with the rank of major;

November 2, '65, assigned as medical director Dept. of Texas, hdqrs. Galveston, and in addition to office duties gave his personal attention to the troops and hospitals during an epidemic of cholera the following summer at Galveston; Nov. 3, 1865, brevetted lieutenant-colonel U.S. Army; Aug. 25, '66, assigned to Dept. of the East on recruiting service, which he improved by introducing baths, etc.; Sept. 5, '67, on a board concerning cholera at Governor's Island, and the condition of the public health in New York, Brooklyn, and vicinity; May 10, '70, on the recommendation of surgeon-general and medical director of Dept. of the East, was appointed chief of staff over the medical departments of all of the charitable institutions of New York City, with the view to introducing the military system, but leave was refused him by the Secretary of War, under Act of Congress forbidding officers of the army to hold civil appointments; 1870-76, served in the Dept. of the Platte; June 16, '76, ordered to the mounted recruiting service at St. Louis, Mo.; while there he devised a system of medical supplies, instruments, reports, etc., for the veterinary service of the army; January, '79, he founded the Army Mutual Aid Association, from which a similar association in the navy was copied; April 26, '80, elected corresponding member of the New York Academy of Sciences; January 30, '83, commissioned surgeon with the rank of lieut.-colonel.

With the rank of Captain.

Azpell, Thomas F. Born in Philadelphia, Pa. Graduate of the Jefferson Med. College, class of 1849; May 13, 1861, volunteered his services as surgeon without pay or emolument* to an independent company organized for extraordinary service, and as vanguard to the first advancing Army of the North under General Patterson; July 1, 1861, forded the Potomac with eighty selected men in a midnight reconnaissance and attack on the enemy's picket line, preliminary to the movement of the main column; July 2, 1862, in the advance at the engagement at Falling Water, and operated on the field; September 25, 1861, invited to appear before the medical board at Washington on the recommendation of the Hon. W. H. Seward, Secretary of State; October 7, 1861, appointed brigade surgeon of vols. by President Lincoln, and assigned to the Western Department; from November, 1861, to March, 1862, on duty as executive officer and operating surgeon to the Fourth Street Military Hospital, St. Louis, Mo.; April, 1862, ligated the left subclavian artery after the battle of Shiloh, being the first operation of the kind (ligation of a subclavian) on record during the Rebellion, and of the five successful cases of the war, being the one pre-eminently so, as evidenced by the fact that the patient, a corporal of Co. C, 8th Iowa, was, when recovered sufficiently, discharged for disability, and after remaining out of the service until June 16, 1863, was then mustered in as captain of the 25th Iowa, was successively promoted, and finally mustered out at the close of the war in 1865 as lieut.-col. (vide "Med. and Surg. History of the War of the Rebellion," Part 1st, Surgical Volume, page 538; from April, 1862, to October, 1865 (with occasional intermediate assignments to other duty and details*) during the periods of ice and low water), assigned as surgeon in charge successively of four U.S. hospital steamers on the Western rivers, and acting simultaneously in the several capacities of commander, operating and consulting surgeon, A.A.Q.M., A.A.C.S., and ordnance officer; the transactions of said vessels being as follows: "Empress," number of trips, six (6); number of sick and wounded transported, three thousand three hundred and eighty-three; number of deaths, fifty-eight (58); number of miles traveled, seven thousand five hundred and forty-six (7546). "City of Alton," number of trips, three; number of sick and wounded, about fifteen hundred (the records of this boat are not available, she was relinquished because of damage to her hurricane roof). "City of Louisiana," renamed the "R. C. Wood," having been reconstructed for hospital purposes (rebuilt from the hull up), number of trips, thirty-three (33); number of sick and wounded transported, eleven thousand and twenty-four (11,024); number of deaths, two hundred and nineteen (219); number of miles traveled, thirty-four thousand eight hundred and five (34,805). The "R. C. Wood" was snagged four times, was fired into twice by the enemy with artillery and musketry, and finally blew out her boilers in Cypress Bend, Mississippi River, on the night of the 13th of April, 1865. "Baltic," principally employed in the removal north of the sick of the Andersonville and other exchanged prisoners, and clearing hospitals at the close of the war. During the above period Surgeon Azpell was also constituted "superintendent of hospital transportation on the Mississippi River and all its tributaries, with authority to issue such orders and give such instructions to surgeons in charge of hospital boats as, in his judgment, the interests of the service require;" July 5, 1865, again placed in charge of the marine general hospital, St. Louis, Mo.; October 18, 1865, lieut.-col. vols., brevet; October 23, 1865, honorably mustered out; served throughout the Civil War without a day's leave of absence; May 14, 1867, captain and asst. surgeon U.S.A.; April 12, 1867, assigned to duty at David's Island, New York harbor; June 15, 1867, post surgeon David's Island, N.Y.H.; August 4, 1869, post surgeon "Camp Ga-ton," California, and "physician to Hoopa Valley Indian reservation;" August 3, 1871, post surgeon "Camp Halleck," Nevada; January 13, 1872, post surgeon "Alcatraz Island," California; March 13, 1875, assigned to duty at Fort Columbus, N. "2. To Rev. Osgood E. Herrick, Chaplain U. S. A., and his estimable wife. There is probably not a single officer or soldier stricken down who does not feel greatly indebted for their sympathies and their kind and constant attentions. The arduous services, too, of the Chaplain, both as pastor and friend, among the stricken in the city, as well as in garrison, were unremitting to the extent of sacrificing his own health for the good of others. Contrary to the advice of the Commanding Officer and his physician, this officer insisted upon keeping his post in spite of ill health, and continuing in the performance of every duty—official, pastoral, and social—until this epidemic was stayed; and he has thereby shown how well the great military virtue of self-sacrifice combines with the higher virtues of religion."

THIRD REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.Colonel.

Brackett, Albert G. Was born in Cherry Valley, Otsego County, New York, February 14, 1828. He removed to Indiana in the autumn of 1846, and the next year volunteered for the Mexican war, and was elected second lieutenant of Company I, Fourth Indiana Volunteers, and mustered into the service of the United States at Jeffersonville, Ind., to date from June 1, 1847, and was promoted first lieutenant of the company June 18, 1847; he was stationed at the School of Instruction, Mier, Mexico, during July and August, 1847, and marched thence to Vera Cruz; his regiment formed a part of General Lane's column on the march towards the city of Mexico; he was engaged, in the fall of 1847, in the skirmishes at Paso de Ovejas and La Hoya, in the battle of Huamantla, in raising the siege of Puebla, and in the combat and bombardment of Atlixco; he subsequently served in the city of Puebla and at Napaloucan, on the national road between Vera Cruz and the city of Mexico, and thus continued until the end of the war; he served for a time while in Puebla as first lieutenant of a battery of artillery, which was composed of Ohio and Indiana volunteers; he served during the Mexican war with great credit, and was honorably discharged on the 16th of July, 1848; he then returned to his home, where he prepared and published, in 1854, an interesting history of the doings of General Lane's brigade in Central Mexico in 1847 and 1848; he was engaged in civil pursuits at Logansport, Ind., when he was appointed a captain in the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855; he was assigned to recruiting service at Logansport, Ind., and Rock Island, Ill., and continued on that duty till the 5th of August, when he joined his company at Jefferson Barracks, where he had station until the 27th of October, when he marched with the regiment to Texas, and arrived at Fort Mason January 14, 1856, where he served until July, when he changed station to Camp Sabinal, and subsequently served at Forts Clark and McIntosh, Camps Hudson, Van Camp, Ives, and Verde, and was frequently in command of stations and expeditions; he defeated a band of Lipans on the Guadalupe River, on the 8th of March, 1856, and killed and wounded a number, recaptured a large quantity of property, including sundry land-papers of great value, and a draft for one thousand pounds sterling, which they had stolen during one of their raids on the Rio Cibola; he was engaged (commanding) in the pursuit of a band of Comanches near the Arroya de las Encinas, between Eagle Pass and Laredo, on the 1st of February, 1857, and commanded his company in an important movement on the Great Comanche trail and into the State of Chihuahua, during which he pursued and routed a party of Comanches near the Presidio de San Vicente, on the 2d of May, 1859; he accompanied Lieutenant-Colonel Lee, who was commanding the Department of Texas, in the spring of 1860, during the border disturbances with Cortinas, and served on the Rio Grande until the next autumn; he was conspicuously active in Texas, successful in his encounters with hostile Indians and in defending the border from the incursions of the savages and the marauding operations of Cortinas, and received upon several occasions the thanks and commendations of the department commander and of General Scott; when the State of Texas was surrendered to the insurgents, he marched with his company from Camp Verde on the 21st of February, 1861, and, having joined other companies of the regiment at Green Lake, proceeded to Indianola, where, on the 31st of March, the detachment embarked on the steamship "Coatzacoalcos" and sailed for New York Harbor, and proceeded thence to Carlisle, where the troops arrived on the 13th of April; his company, having been refitted and mounted, proceeded to Washington, and a few days later crossed the Potomac over the Long Bridge into Virginia with the first troops on the 23d of May, 1861, and participated in the capture of Alexandria, and he was then assigned to a temporary station at Arlington; he commanded a squadron of the regiment in the skirmish at Blackburn's Ford, Va., on the 18th of July, 1861, which was an important affair; the squadron was exposed to a heavy fire, and the men not only served as cavalry, but also assisted the artillerymen to bring their guns into action; he participated in the battle of Bull Run, where his company served as an escort to General McDowell during the entire day, having been detailed for that duty on the 19th; during the disastrous retreat his company, with the regular cavalry, constituted about all there was of a rear-guard, and by vigorous and intelligent action did much to restore order among the volunteers, who had been abandoned by their own appointed officers; having obtained, in September, a leave of absence for the purpose of accepting a commission in the volunteer service, he proceeded West, where he served as an aide-de-camp to Governor Yates, of Illinois, and commanded Camp

Douglas, at Chicago, until February, 1862; he was appointed colonel of the Ninth Illinois Cavalry, to date from October 26, 1861, and marched with the regiment to Missouri, and thence to Arkansas as a part of Steele's brigade of General Curtis's army; he defeated the enemy at the Wadell Farm, in Jackson County, Ark., on the 12th of June, 1862, and saved a valuable train belonging to the government; and on the 27th he attacked, with two battalions of his regiment, a superior force of the enemy at Stewart's Plantation, near Village Creek, in Jackson County, Ark., and fought them until dark, losing thirty-three officers and men killed and wounded, and as many horses, and inflicting a severe loss upon the enemy; he was wounded in the breast by a rifle-ball, but retained the command throughout the action; he was also engaged in the action at Cache Bayou, Ark.; he was made a brevet major, to date from June 28, 1862, for gallant and meritorious services in the campaign of 1862 in Arkansas, and was promoted a major in the First Cavalry, to date from July 17, 1862; he served as chief of cavalry in the Department of Missouri, and as a mustering and disbursing officer and as an assistant commissary of musters at St. Louis in 1863; he commanded a cavalry brigade in West Tennessee, and was employed in defending the Memphis and Charleston Railway, and was an assistant inspector-general of cavalry in the Department of the Cumberland, and a special inspector, in 1864; he participated in the siege and battles in front of Atlanta and the battle of Nashville, and was made a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from September 1, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services during the Atlanta campaign; he was mustered out of volunteer service on the 26th of October, 1864, and was made a brevet colonel, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion; he prepared, during the war, a history of the United States Cavalry from 1793 to 1863, which was published in 1865; he joined and commanded his regiment at New Orleans in September, 1865, and accompanied it to the Pacific Coast in January, 1866, where he commanded the Presidio of San Francisco, Drum Barracks, Los Angeles, Fort Churchill, and Fort Vancouver; he also commanded the District of Nevada during a part of the year 1866, and was very successful in the conduct of operations against hostile Indians, and inflicted upon them a loss of three hundred and twenty-seven killed, wounded, and captured in the combats of the year with the regulars and volunteers who were serving under his command; he commanded the District of Summit Lake and Nevada in 1867, and was on duty in Arizona when he was promoted lieutenant-colonel of the Second Cavalry, to date from June 9, 1868; he joined his regiment at Fort McPherson, Neb., in March, 1869, and commanded it until May, when he marched with four companies to Fort Ellis, Mont., where he arrived in July, and remained until December, in the mean time distributing supplies to the Crow Indians; he then rejoined the regimental headquarters at Fort Omaha, where he had station until March, 1871, when he was assigned to the command of Fort Fred Steele, Wyo., which he retained until June, and suppressed on the 30th of April a riot among the coal-miners at Carbon; he again served at Fort Omaha from June, 1871, to September, 1872, when he was assigned to the command of Fort Bridger, and was subsequently transferred to Camp Stambaugh, and had service at the two stations until September, 1873; he also commanded the District of Wind River from May to September, 1873; he was on general court-martial duty at Omaha during October, 1873, and thereafter on a leave of absence until February, 1874, when he joined at Fort Sanders, where he served until September, 1877, and commanded the station and his regiment at different periods, having occasional leaves and detached service, chiefly on general court-martial duty, to other stations within the department; he commanded his regiment during the change of stations from the Department of the Platte to the Department of Dakota, and marched with the headquarters from Fort Sanders, Wyo., to Fort Custer, Mont., during September and October, 1877; he served in the Department of Dakota until the summer of 1879, and commanded the District of the Yellowstone from March to June; he was promoted colonel of the Third Cavalry, to date from March 20, 1879, and joined his regiment at Fort Laramie, Wyo., in July, and served at the station until October, when he was ordered to field service against the hostile Utes of Colorado; he proceeded to Rawlins, Wyo., where he established a camp of thirteen companies belonging to the Ninth Infantry, Third and Fifth Cavalry, which was broken up on the 28th of November, when he returned to Fort Laramie, and served there until April, 1880, when he changed station with his headquarters to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he arrived on the 27th, and served until May, 1882, except tours of general court-martial service at Camp Douglas, Salt Lake City, and Rock Creek; he declined, on the 10th of August, 1880, the appointment of superintendent of the mounted recruiting service; he was elected, in February, 1881, a vice-president of the National Association of Veterans of the Mexican War, and subsequently was elected a vice-president of the Wyoming Academy of Science; he was transferred, in May, 1882, with his regiment from the Department of the Platte to the Department of Arizona, where he commanded Forts Thomas and Grant, and directed the field operations against the hostile Apache Indians until August, 1882, when, having been appointed superintendent of the mounted recruiting service, he relinquished the command of his regiment and proceeded to Jefferson Barracks, where he arrived on the 1st of October, 1882, and entered upon the duties of his office; he is now (May, 1883) employed in gathering recruits for the mounted service, and forwarding them to their regiments on the frontier.

Schwatka, Frederick. Born in Galena, Illinois, September 29, 1849, and with his parents immigrated to Oregon in 1853. His early life was spent at Astoria, Albany, Eugene City, and Salem, mostly at the latter point, with the early history of which he was more or less intimately connected; he entered West Point June 8, 1867, having passed a successful examination and continued his studies unremittingly until 1871, when he graduated June 13, and was assigned to active service as 2d lieutenant in the 3d U. S. Cavalry, then serving in Arizona; he was afterwards (Dec. '71) transferred to the Department of the Platte; he meanwhile turned his attention to the study of law and was admitted to the U. S. Circuit Court for the District of Nebraska May 5, 1875; he then studied medicine and surgery and graduated at the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, in New York, March 1, 1876; rejoining his regiment he served in the Sioux war of 1876, participating in the actions of the Rosebud (June 17, 1876) and Slim Buttes (Sept. 9, 1876), and minor Indian skirmishes; at his own request was granted leave of absence to command the Franklin search party in the Arctic Ocean, in which he was employed from June 19, 1878, to September 22, 1880, the object of the expedition being to find the records and relics and determine the fate of the British Northwest Passage Expedition of Sir John Franklin, which sailed from England in the "Erebus" and "Terror" in 1845, and of which but very little had ever been ascertained; the expedition under Lieutenant Schwatka's command made the longest sledge journey in the world, a distance of 3251 miles, being absent from its source of supplies eleven months and twenty days, subsisting off of the game of the country, the trip having been undertaken with but one month's rations provided, the party living on the same food as did their Esquimaux allies and guides; it encountered the lowest temperature ever recorded by white men traveling in the field, viz.: 71 degrees Fahrenheit, or 103 degrees below freezing point; it discovered and buried many of the skeletons of Sir John Franklin's lost party, secured numerous relics, and otherwise cleared away much of the mystery connected with that ill-fated expedition; on March 20, 1879, Lieut. Schwatka was promoted to a 1st lieutenancy in the 3d Cavalry, and October 10, 1881, was appointed aide-de-camp on the staff of General Nelson A. Miles, commanding the Department of the Columbia, and is at present stationed at Fort Vancouver on that duty; he has received numberless honorary distinctions since his return from the North, and is at present honorary and corresponding member of many European and American scientific—especially geographical—societies, and has by special request delivered lectures in many of the principal cities of the East.

FOURTH REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

Colonel.

Royall, William B. Born in Va. Appointed from Mo. Heserved in the Mexican War as 1st lt. of Co. D, 2d Mo. Mounted Vols., from July 31, '46, to Aug. 14, '47. He reported at Ft. Leavenworth in the summer of 1846, and marched with his regiment to Santa Fé, and while serving in New Mexico during the year 1847 was engaged in the battle of Cañada, the skirmish of Embudo, and the assault upon and capture of the Puebla de Taos. He was assigned, with Capt. Burgwin, of the 1st Drag., to the duty of charging the fortifications of the Puebla de Taos, where he was distinguished for conspicuous gallantry. On the expiration of the term of service of his regiment it was consolidated into five companies and reorganized as the Santa Fé Battalion. He was then commissioned by the President, under Section 21 of the Act of Congress approved March 3, 1847, a first lieutenant and adjutant of the battalion, to date from August 14, 1847, and ordered to Missouri on recruiting service. After securing the required number of men he reported at Fort Leavenworth, and in May, 1848, started with his detachment for Santa Fé, having in charge Paymaster Bryant (who had eighty thousand dollars with him), a supply-train of fifty wagons, and five hundred head of beef-cattle. When encamped near the junction of Coon Creek and the Arkansas River, between Forts Dodge and Larned, he was attacked at daybreak on the 18th of June, 1848, by three hundred Comanche warriors. He had scarcely time to corrall the cattle and secure the horses when the Indians charged through his camp and made repeated efforts to stampede the stock. In these charges nine warriors were killed and many were wounded. The Indians then fled across the river in a southerly direction, when he mounted thirty-four picked men and pursued them four miles in the sand-hills, killing fourteen and having four men severely wounded. He was outnumbered three to one and was encumbered with the supply-train and cattle, but he succeeded in placing on record as creditable a combat with hostile Indians as can be found in the annals of frontier service. When he arrived at Santa Fé the war was ended and the troops were preparing to return home. He was then assigned with the recruits on escort duty to Gen. Sterling Price, and marched with the command to Independence, Mo., where he was mustered out of service on the 20th of October, 1848, and returned to civil pursuits. In consideration of his gallant services in the combat on Coon Creek he was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855, and was the senior first lieutenant of the appointments in that grade in the four new regiments created by the act of Congress of March 3, 1855, of those who had previously served as lieutenants of volunteers during the war with Mexico. He received his appointment at Columbia, Mo., and proceeded to Pittsburg, Pa., where he served on recruiting service until July, when he joined the regiment at Jefferson Barracks and was assigned to the command of a detachment of Company C, which he retained until the 24th of August, when the headquarters of his company joined and he returned to company duty until the 20th of September, when he was detached to recruiting service at Columbia, Mo. He rejoined his company at Jefferson Barracks in October, and marched with the regiment to Texas, and arrived at Fort Mason January 14, 1856, where he had station until June, and participated in an expedition to the head-waters of the Concho, and was engaged in a combat with hostile Comanches on the 1st of May, and won a special mention in the official report for gallant conduct. He was then assigned to recruiting service at Philadelphia, where he served until November, 1858. He then conducted a detachment of recruits from Carlisle to Texas, and rejoined the regiment at Camp Radziminski December 31, 1858, and assumed the command of Company C, which he retained until the 10th of February, 1860.

He was engaged in the brilliant combat with hostile Comanches on a tributary of the Nescutunga, near Fort Atkinson, May 13, 1859, and was highly commended for conspicuous gallantry and energy, and won a special mention for particular services in holding the enemy in check until the main command arrived on the scene of action, and in very adroitly capturing their horses, for which, in the language of the report, "great credit is due him." He was also complimented in orders by General Scott. He changed station to Camp Cooper in June, 1859, participated in the Cimarron expedition October–November, 1859, and changed station in December to Camp Lawson, where he served until May, 1860. He was then transferred to Fort Inge, where he had station (on leave of absence June, 1860–February, 1861) until March 19, 1861, when he marched to Indianola (commanding company) and embarked on the steamship Empire City just in time to escape capture, and arrived at Carlisle on the 27th of April, 1861. He was promoted a captain March 21, 1861, and participated in General Patterson's Shenandoah campaign, and was engaged in the action of Falling Waters and the skirmishes near Martinsburg and Bunker Hill; served in the defenses of Washington during the winter of 1861–62, and participated in the Virginia Peninsular campaign, and was engaged in the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg, and in almost daily skirmishes with the enemy during the advance towards Richmond, the battle of Hanover Court-House, and the reconnaissance towards Ashland, and was made a brevet major, to date from May 27, 1862, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Hanover Court-House. He was commanding two squadrons of the regiment on the extreme right of the Army of the Potomac, in the vicinity of the Pamunkey River, when he fought the action of Old Church, June 13, 1862, and received six sabre wounds while engaged in hand-to-hand conflicts with the enemy. He made a stubborn fight, but was overwhelmed by superior numbers, and, although surrounded and grievously wounded, he cut through the enemy and joined the main army. He received two sabre contusions on the right side of the head; a cut two inches long on the forehead; a long cut on the left cheek which bled profusely; a cut on the right wrist, dividing a tendon; and an incised fracture, four inches long, of the left parietal bone. These wounds, attesting the severity of the conflict, disabled him from field service for some years. He was made a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from June 13, 1862, for gallant and meritorious services at Old Church, and was offered, in September, 1862, the colonelcy of the Twenty-seventh New Jersey Volunteers, which he was compelled to decline because of his wounds, which incapacitated him for field service, and his sense of justice forbade him to accept the pay of a grade when he was unable to discharge the duties belonging to it. This was a keen disappointment, because it was understood that an appointment of brigadier-general of volunteers would soon follow if he accepted. When he was able to travel, although still suffering from his wounds, he reported at Washington in October, 1862, for the purpose of joining the regiment, but it was decided to send him to Louisville as a mustering and disbursing officer, where he served until March, 1864. He was then transferred to the Cavalry Bureau at Washington, where he served until May, when he was appointed superintendent of the Mounted Recruiting Service at Carlisle and commandant of the drafted camp of that district. He was promoted a major in the regiment December 7, 1863, and was made a brevet colonel, to date from March 13, 1865, for arduous and faithful services in the recruitment of the armies of the United States. He was relieved from duty at Carlisle in April, 1866, and ordered to Nashville, Tenn., where he commanded four companies of the regiment until November, when he was relieved by the lieutenant-colonel and performed garrison duty until April, 1867. He was then ordered to North Carolina and instructed to inspect the cavalry serving in the Second Military District. When this duty was completed he was appointed chief of the Bureau of Civil Affairs, and served in that position from May to August, 1867, and prepared the registration-books and designated all the registrars of elections in the Carolinas. He was relieved at his own request, and assigned to the post of Morganton, where his duties were of a delicate and important nature, involving the execution of the reconstruction acts of Congress in fifteen counties of Western North Carolina. He discharged them with great judgment and marked fidelity to the government, and continued in command of the station until August, 1868, when he was transferred to Raleigh, and was ordered thence in September, with a detachment of the regiment, to frontier service. He took the field at Fort Harker, Kan., on the 1st of October with four companies, and commanded in the affair on Prairie Dog Creek, Kan. He relinquished the command to a senior major on the 23d, and was assigned to Fort Riley, where he had station until April, 1869, when he marched a detachment of recruits to Fort McPherson, Neb. He served with the Republican River expedition of 1869, which resulted in opening the beautiful valleys of that river and its tributaries for settlement, and commanded the expedition from July 30 to August 24, and was engaged (commanding) in the affairs on the Republican River, near Spring Creek, Nebraska; in the sand-hills near Frenchman's Fork, Colorado; in the sand-hills south of Julesburg, Col.; and in the Niobrara pursuit, and (second in command) in the brilliant action at Summit Springs, Col. He served at Fort McPherson from the 24th of August to the 15th of October, 1869, when he availed himself of a leave of absence, and joined a detachment of the regiment at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., December 22, 1869, where he had station until March, 1872, and performed garrison duty and commanded the detachment of seven companies at different periods. He then proceeded to Arizona, and arrived at Camp Grant on the 6th of June, and commanded the station until the 9th of July, when he was assigned to court-martial duty at Fort Whipple, where he served until the following October. He was then on leave of absence and detached service at San Francisco until March, 1873, when he rejoined at Camp Lowell, commanded the regiment a few days, and proceeded to Camp Grant, where he arrived on the 28th of March, and commanded the station until the 20th of April, when he was ordered to San Diego and Los Angeles as a member of a board to purchase cavalry horses. He continued on that duty until July, when he was assigned to duty at the headquarters of the Department of California as an inspecting officer until July, 1874. He rejoined at Camp Lowell, and assumed command of the regiment on the 18th of July, and served at the station until the 1st of May, 1875, when he marched with the headquarters and six companies, by the way of the Rio Grande, to Fort Lyon, Col., where the command was distributed, and on the 28th of June he relinquished the command of the regiment at Fort Hays, Kan., and availed himself of a leave of absence. He assumed the command of Fort Dodge, Kan., on the 23d of November, and a few days later (December 2, 1875) he was promoted lieutenant-colonel of the Third Cavalry, which terminated a service of nearly twenty-one years in the Fifth Cavalry. He was transferred to the Department of the Platte, and assigned to the command of Fort Sidney, Neb., which he relinquished in January, 1876, and proceeded to Philadelphia, where he served as a member of a board convened by the War Department for the purpose of considering questions of general interest to the service, relating to supplies and the best methods of issue. While he was thus employed General Crook applied for him to command the cavalry during the Sioux campaign of 1876. He returned to the department, and was employed in purchasing horses during April and May, and joined the expedition on the 18th of May and commanded his regiment in the field. On the organization of the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition at Goose Creek on the 4th of August, a battalion of the Second Cavalry was added to his command, which gave him fifteen companies. He was distinguished for conspicuous gallantry in the action on Rose-Bud Creek, Mon., and participated in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak. When the expedition was disbanded at Fort Robinson, Neb., on the 24th of October, he was appointed acting assistant inspector-general of the Department of the Platte, and continued in the discharge of the duties of that office until September, 1882, when he proceeded to Fort Whipple, Arizona, and assumed the command of the Third Cavalry, which he retained until he was promoted colonel of the Fourth Cavalry, to date from November 1, 1882.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

Colonel.

Merritt, Wesley. Born in New York. Appointed from New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1860 (the term of the class being five years), and assigned to the Second Dragoons (now Second Cavalry) as a brevet second lieutenant. He was promoted, in that regiment, a second lieutenant January 28, 1861; a first lieutenant May 18, 1861; and a captain April 5, 1862. He joined his company in Utah, in November, 1860, and served at Camp Floyd until the early summer of 1861. He was appointed adjutant of his regiment on the 1st of July, 1861, and served as acting assistant adjutant-general of the Department of Utah and of the United States troops during the movement from Utah to Washington, where he arrived in October, 1861, and served during the winter of 1861-62 in the defenses of the city. He relinquished the adjutancy of his regiment January 1, 1862, having been previously appointed an aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General Cooke, who commanded the regular cavalry in the defenses of Washington, and later the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac in the Virginia Peninsular campaign, and participated in the siege of Yorktown, the skirmish near Williamsburg, and the battles of Williamsburg, Gaines' Mill, and Glendale. He continued on the staff of General Cooke until September, 1862, when he was transferred to the headquarters of the defenses and Department of Washington, commanded by General Heintzelman, where he remained until April, 1863, when he again entered the field as an aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General Stoneman, and served with him, in April and May, during his raid towards Richmond. He then rejoined his regiment, which he commanded in the superb cavalry engagement at Beverly Ford, where, on the 9th of June, 1863, the National forces crossed the Rappahannock, surprised the enemy's pickets, and maintained for hours an obstinate battle with a superior force. He narrowly escaped capture, being at one time almost, if not quite, surrounded by the enemy. He won the highest commendation from General Buford for conspicuous gallantry on that field; and in those days the praise of John Buford was more highly esteemed by the officers under his command than a brevet commission. He commanded his regiment in the engagements at Upperville and Aldie, and, about the 1st of July, was appointed, in recognition of brilliant services at Beverly Ford, a brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from June 29, 1863, and was assigned to the command of the Reserve Cavalry Brigade of the Army of the Potomac during the Pennsylvania campaign, and participated in the battle of Gettysburg, where he won his first brevet (major), to date from July 1, 1863; the pursuit of the enemy to Warrenton; the actions at Williamsport, Hagerstown, Boonesboro', Funkstown, Falling Waters, and Manassas Gap. He then succeeded General Buford in the command of the first division of cavalry, participated in the operations in Central Virginia, and was engaged at Culpepper Court-House, Brandy Station, and Barnett's Ford. He participated in the Richmond campaign of 1864, and was engaged at Todd's Tavern, Yellow Tavern, Meadow Bridge, Hawes' Shop, Old Church, and Cold Harbor, winning the brevet of lieutenant-colonel, to date from May 11, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Yellow Tavern; and the brevet of colonel, to date from May 28, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Hawes' Shop. He accompanied General Sheridan on the cavalry raid towards Charlottesville, and was engaged in the battle of Trevillian Station (where he rescued the third division of cavalry from impending capture when almost surrounded by the enemy) and the action at Derbytown. General Merritt was transferred in August, 1864, from the Army of the Potomac to the Shenandoah Valley, and moved, by the way of City Point, Giesboro' Point, and Harper's Ferry, to Halltown, where he arrived about the 8th. His division (first) was then composed of seventeen regiments of cavalry, organized into three brigades (commanded by Custer, Devin, and Gibbs), and two batteries of artillery. The Shenandoah Valley is one of the garden-spots of Virginia, and each year, about the time the crops ripened, the Confederates returned to the Valley to harvest them. It was also the chosen route by which to invade Maryland and Pennsylvania, and a movement of troops on either side in the Valley always compelled a counter movement by the threatened party. It was to end this condition of affairs that the Army of the Shenandoah was organized, and one of the first duties imposed upon General Merritt's division was to destroy the forage and seize the live stock from Millwood to Winchester and Petticoat Gap, for the purpose of making the Valley untenable for the raiding parties of the enemy. Not many days were required for the division, stretching across the Valley, to destroy everything in the shape of forage and subsistence and to capture all serviceable live stock; and then came the struggle with General Early's army for the possession of the Valley, during which General Merritt was continuously employed with his command, and participated in the affairs at Stone Chapel, Newtown, Cedarville, Kearneysville, Bunker Hill, Leetown, Smithfield, Berryville, Opequan Creek, and the battle of Winchester, where the turning column of cavalry at a critical moment when the result of the battle was uncertain, repeatedly charged the left of the enemy's line, and, together with the rallied infantry, swept down upon General Early and sent him whirling through Winchester. The affair at Cedarville, near Front Royal on the Shenandoah, was a brilliant success for General Merritt, being gained unaided and against odds. He defeated General Kershaw's division of infantry and two brigades of cavalry in an attempt to force a passage of the Shenandoah, and inflicted upon the enemy a loss of six hundred men. Then followed the movement to Front Royal, the engagement at Milford, and the skilful manœuvring of the cavalry in front of Bunker Hill, until the Sixth and Nineteenth Corps seized an advanced position in front of Fisher's Hill, which they held until the Eighth Corps turned General Early's flank and forced him to abandon his fortifications, when the cavalry joined the pursuit and participated in the actions at Luray, Brown's Gap, Mount Crawford, and Woodstock, and on the 19th of October General Merritt won for himself and his division an enduring fame at the battle of Cedar Creek, where he confronted the enemy from the first attack in the morning until their retreat that night, and held his position on the pike, just north of Middletown, all day, although entirely unassisted by the infantry, until the enemy gave up the contest, when he charged with his cavalry, and, crossing the stream below the bridge, continued the pursuit to Fisher's Hill, capturing and retaking a large number of guns and colors and much material of war. He received the brevet of major-general of volunteers, to date from October 19, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services at the battles of Winchester and Fisher's Hill, and was specially mentioned in the official report of General Torbert for gallantry and good judgment at Cedar Creek, and recommended for promotion, which upon several occasions he had justly earned. Then followed the action at Middletown, and in the latter part of November General Merritt was detached, with his division, to the east side of the Blue Ridge, by the way of Ashby's Gap, to operate against Mosby's guerrillas. He participated in the actions at Gordonsville in December, and at Ashlund in March, 1865. He moved with General Sheridan in February from the winter camp near Winchester, being in command of the cavalry of the Army of the Shenandoah; participated in the closing Richmond campaign of 1865, and was engaged in the battles of Dinwiddie Court-House and Five Forks, where he commanded the left of the National lines and won the brevet of brigadier-general, to date from March 13, 1865 (antedated), and a commission as a major-general of volunteers, to date from April 1, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services at Five Forks and in the Shenandoah Valley. He was engaged in the skirmishes at Scott's Cross-Roads and Drummmond Mills (the cavalry of the Army of the James having been added to his command), the battle of Sailor's Creek, the action of Appomattox Station, and was present at the surrender at Appomattox Court-House on the 9th of April, 1865, being one of the three commissioners from the National army to arrange with the Confederate commissioners for the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia.

He then participated in the movement against General J. E. Johnston's army in North Carolina, after which he was transferred to the Military Division of the Southwest, where he served in command of two divisions of cavalry, and as chief of cavalry until July, 1865; then to the command of the cavalry in the Department of Texas until November, and thereafter as chief of cavalry in the Military Division of the Gulf until December 31, 1865. He was mustered out of volunteer service February 1, 1866, and was made a brevet major-general, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the campaign ending with the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia. He visited Europe during the summer of 1866, and upon his return to the United States was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the Ninth Cavalry, to date from July 28, 1866; was employed on inspection duty, with station at the headquarters of the Department of the Gulf until February, 1867, when he assumed the command of his regiment at New Orleans and proceeded to Texas, and served at San Antonio and Fort Davis until September, 1869; he was then appointed a member of the general tactics board which was convened at St. Louis, where he remained until December, 1870, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until October, 1871. He then returned to Texas and resumed the command of his regiment at Fort Stockton, and afterwards served at Forts Clark and Concho until May, 1874. He was appointed in March, 1875, inspector of cavalry for the Military Division of the Missouri, embracing the Departments of Texas, the Missouri, the Platte, and Dakota, and retained the position until July 1, 1876, when he was promoted colonel of the Fifth Cavalry. He immediately joined the regiment in the Department of the Platte, and commanded in the affair near Indian Creek, Wyo., July 17, 1876, where he intercepted a large number of Cheyennes who were moving north to join the hostile Sioux, and drove them back to the Red Cloud agency. He then moved by rapid marches to Goose Creek, Mon., where he effected a junction with General Crook, and relinquished the command of the regiment on the 4th of August, having been appointed chief of cavalry of the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition. He participated in the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak., September 9-10, 1876, and upon the disbandment of the expedition in October, at Fort Robinson, Neb., resumed the command of the regiment, and was assigned to Fort D. A.

Russell, Wyo., where he had station until the 29th of April, 1880. He commanded the United States forces assembled at Omaha in July, 1877, during the railway riots of that summer; he also commanded the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés in September and October, 1877. He was employed on field service with a part of the regiment in Northern Wyoming from May to November, 1878, and commanded the column which was dispatched to the relief of the troops besieged by the Ute Indians at Milk Creek, Col. He made a remarkably rapid march from Rawlins, Wyo., to the scene of danger, where he arrived on the 5th of October, 1879, rescued the troops from their perilous position, and in a short skirmish dispersed the enemy. He then pushed forward to the agency on White River, found the buildings destroyed, the agent and his employés murdered, and the women and children taken into captivity. He at once made arrangements for the pursuit and chastisement of the savages, and had penetrated their mountain fastnesses about twenty-five miles when he was halted, at the request of the Interior Department, and ordered to return to White River; here he encamped until the latter part of November, when he returned to Fort D. A. Russell, where he served until the next spring, when he changed station, with the regimental headquarters and four companies, to Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he arrived on the 2d of May, 1880. He declined, in August, 1880, the superintendency of the mounted recruiting service rather than relinquish the opportunities for field service in command of the regiment, which he held without interruption from October, 1876, to August, 1882, when he was appointed superintendent of the mounted recruiting service; but a few days later the assignment was revoked, and he was appointed superintendent of the Military Academy, to date from September 1, 1882.

Lieutenant-Colonel.

Compton, Charles E. Born in New Jersey. Appointed from Iowa. He was engaged in railway engineering in the State of Iowa when the government called for volunteers to suppress the Rebellion. He enlisted for three months in the First Iowa Infantry on the 7th of May, 1861, and served as a first sergeant until the 24th of May, when he was appointed sergeant-major, and served in that grade until he was honorably discharged on the 21st of August, 1861. He served in General Lyon's campaign in Southwestern Missouri; was engaged in the action at Dug

Springs, and a few days later in the battle of Wilson's Creek, where his regiment, which occupied a position in the Third Brigade of the first column, was distinguished for its vigor, coolness, and conspicuous gallantry, and where he won a special mention in the official report of the lieutenant-colonel commanding the regiment for valuable aid and assistance on that occasion. He carried from the field the national colors which were displayed by his regiment during the battle, delivered them to the adjutant-general of Iowa, and received from that official, in the name of the State, a beautiful silk flag as a recognition of his valuable services during the campaign. He re-entered the army on the 19th of October, 1861, as a captain in the Eleventh Iowa Volunteers, and was actively employed near Davenport until December, 1861, in recruiting and organizing his company. He was then transferred to Benton Barracks, near St. Louis, whence he moved, in the spring of 1862, to Pittsburg Landing, where his regiment formed a part of the Iowa brigade in General McClelland's division and participated in the battle of Shiloh. He moved thence to Corinth, where he arrived in May and remained until September, when he marched with his regiment to Iuka, but arrived too late to participate in the battle at that place. He returned to Corinth for the battle of the 3d of October, remained there until December, when he was sent to Holly Springs, Miss., and thence to Memphis, Tenn., and in January, 1863, was ordered to Lake Providence, La., where he was serving when he was appointed major of the Forty-seventh United States Colored Troops, to date from May 5, 1863. He continued on duty at that station until February, 1864, when he participated in General Sherman's Meridian campaign, serving as an aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General Crocker, commanding a division in the Seventeenth Army Corps. He then proceeded to New York City and thence to Washington, where he was assigned in May, 1864, to duty in the office of the inspector-general of the army, and was thus employed until September. He also participated in the defense of Washington during General Early's raid in July, 1864. He joined his regiment at Vicksburg in October, 1864, and was appointed inspector of General Hawkins's division of United States colored troops, and continued on that duty until April, 1865. He was promoted lieutenant-colonel of the Fifty-third United States Colored Troops, to date from December 9, 1864; accompanied General Hawkins's division in January, 1865, from

Vicksburg to Algiers (opposite New Orleans), and thence in February to Pensacola by water, whence the division was marched overland to participate in the operations against Mobile. He was engaged with the division in the capture of Fort Blakely, and received the brevet of lieutenant-colonel, to date from March 2, 1867, for gallant and meritorious services during the campaign against Mobile. Lieutenant-Colonel Compton was strongly urged in May, 1865, for the colonelcy of the Forty-sixth United States Colored Troops, and would have received the appointment but for the fact that the regiment was reduced below the number of men required by law to entitle it to a colonel. After the fall of Mobile he returned to special duty in the office of the inspector-general of the army, where he served until September, 1865, when he was appointed inspector-general of the Department of the South, and continued in the discharge of the duties of that position until he was mustered out of volunteer service on the 8th of March, 1866. Upon the increase of the regular army he was appointed major of the Fortieth Infantry, to date from July 28, 1866. He accepted the commission in September, and upon reporting at Camp Distribution, Va., was assigned to the command of the station and to duty connected with the organization of his regiment. He embarked in February, 1867, with six companies for North Carolina, and while en route the command was shipwrecked near Fort Fisher, the vessel, government stores, and all personal effects being lost. He served at Forts Johnson and Macon and at Goldsboro', N. C., and was actively employed during the reconstruction period and until March 15, 1869, when, because of the reduction of the army, he was transferred to the list of unassigned officers and placed on duty in the Freedmen's Bureau as assistant commissioner for North Carolina. He continued in the discharge of the duty until May, when he was transferred to Nashville as superintendent of education in the Freedmen's Bureau for Tennessee, and received the thanks of General Howard for the promptness, fidelity, and accuracy displayed by him in transacting and closing the business of the office. He was assigned on the 15th of December, 1870, with his original rank to the Sixth Cavalry, and joined his regiment in February, 1871, at Fort Richardson, Texas, where he served until March, 1871, when he was ordered to Kansas, and had stations at Forts Hays, Harker, and Dodge until August, 1875. While en route with a small escort to Camp Supply, I. T., on an inspecting tour, he was attacked on the 22d of June, 1874, by a party of hostile Indians at Buffalo Creek, and, after a running combat for twelve miles, defeated the enemy with the loss of only one man wounded; two days later, when returning to his station, he was again attacked by hostile Indians in the Bear Creek Hills, thirty-five miles south of Fort Dodge, and after a severe combat again defeated them with a loss of nearly all their property and seventeen warriors killed and wounded. He participated in Colonel Miles's campaign of 1874-75, during which he commanded a battalion of the Sixth Cavalry and operated chiefly in the Indian Territory and Northern Texas from July, 1874, to February, 1875, and was engaged in the combat with the Kiowas, Cheyennes, and Comanches on Red River, Texas, August 30, 1874, where he was distinguished for leading his battalion in a gallant and successful charge against the enemy. He was complimented in orders for gallantry on this occasion, and was nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet colonel, to date from August 30, 1874, for zealous and valuable services during the campaign. These operations ended, he resumed station at Fort Dodge, where he served until his regiment was ordered to Arizona. He conducted the second battalion to Santa Fé, where the six companies separated for their respective stations, and he proceeded to Camp Lowell, where he arrived in October, 1875. He served at Camps Lowell, Grant, and Apache, and commanded his regiment from October 16, 1875, to March 2, 1876; from October 9, 1876, to July, 1878; and from May 12, 1879, to July 6, 1879. He had charge of the field operations in Southeastern Arizona from April, 1878, to July, 1879, and the ability with which he conducted the operations, and his quickness, vigilance, and discretion in covering important places with troops at the right time won him a conspicuous and complimentary mention in the annual report of the department commander for the year 1879. He was promoted in July, 1879, lieutenant-colonel of the Fifth Cavalry, to date from April 29, 1879, and, having relinquished his command in Arizona, proceeded to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he arrived on the 22d of August and joined the regiment. He served with the troops which were dispatched under the command of Colonel Merritt to the relief of the besieged troops at Milk Creek, Col., participated in raising the siege and skirmish at that place on the 5th of October, and marched thence to the Ute Agency on White River, where he had command of the cavalry until November, when he returned to Fort D. A. Russell. He proceeded in March, 1880, to White River, and conducted the cavalry to Rawlins, Wyo. He marched from Fort D. A. Russell on the 27th of April with two companies of the regiment, arrived at Fort Sidney, Neb., on the 1st of May and assumed the command of the post, which he retained until January 15, 1882, and was employed on general court-martial duty at Salt Lake, Fort D. A. Russell, and Fort McKinney. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until May 15, 1882, when he rejoined at Fort Sidney, where he is now serving. When Colonel Merritt was appointed superintendent of the Military Academy Lieutenant-Colonel Compton succeeded to the command of the regiment, which he has held since August 4, 1882.

Majors.

Upham, John J. Born in Delaware. Appointed from Wisconsin. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1859, and assigned to the Ninth Infantry as a brevet second lieutenant, but, without joining that regiment, was appointed a second lieutenant in the Sixth Infantry December 2, 1859, and was promoted, in his regiment, a first lieutenant May 4, 1861, and a captain September 9, 1861. On the expiration of his graduating leave he was assigned to Governor's Island, where he had station until after his transfer to the Sixth Infantry. He then proceeded to California and served at Fort Crook and Benicia Barracks during the years 1860-61, and was the adjutant of the regiment from July to September, 1861. He served in the defenses of Washington during the winter of 1861-62; participated in the Virginia Peninsular campaign, and was engaged in the siege of Yorktown and the battle of Malvern Hill, and served in the defenses of Washington during the summer of 1862. He participated in the Pennsylvania campaign, and was engaged in the battle of Gettysburg and in the pursuit of the enemy to Warrenton, and was made a brevet major, to date from July 2, 1863, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Gettysburg. He was stationed in New York Harbor from August, 1863, to January, 1864, when he was assigned to duty as a mustering and disbursing officer, and served in that capacity until April, 1865, and had stations at Elmira, Philadelphia, and Detroit. He then served in Georgia and South Carolina until June, 1866, when he availed himself of a leave of absence and visited Europe.

He returned to the United States in April, 1867, and served in the Carolinas until March, 1869, and had stations at Charleston, Wilmington, and Florence. He was then ordered to the frontier, and served at Fort Gibson, Indian Territory, Fort Smith, Ark., and Crawfordsville and Girard, Kan., until January 1, 1871, when he was transferred to the Sixth Cavalry and continued to serve in Kansas, Texas, and the Indian Territory, where he had considerable field service until August 18, 1874, when he relinquished the command of his company at Kingfisher's Creek, Indian Territory, having been promoted a major in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from August 1, 1874. He served at Fort Leavenworth from January to April, 1874, as a member of a board of officers convened to report upon changes, if any, to be made in horse-equipments, and continued on duty in the Department of the Missouri until the regiment arrived at Fort Lyon, Col., and the companies were assigned to stations, and on the 7th of September, 1875, he assumed command of Fort Gibson, Indian Territory, where he served until June 6, 1876, when he was ordered to field service in the Department of the Platte. He joined the headquarters of the regiment on the 10th of June and served in the District of the Black Hills and with the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition until the following October, and was engaged in the combat at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak., and commanded the rear-guard (a battalion of the regiment) in the second skirmish at Slim Buttes on the morning of the 10th of September. He was assigned, at the end of the campaign, to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he served until the 24th of November, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until the 24th of January, 1877. He was then assigned to special duty in the Indian Department for the purpose of investigating the management of the Union Agency in the Indian Territory, and was thus employed until the 26th of June, when he resumed his leave of absence and again visited Europe. He returned to the United States in June, 1878, and commanded Fort Washakie, in Northwestern Wyoming, from August, 1878, to April, 1880, when he was transferred to Fort Niobrara, a new four-company post in Northern Nebraska. He joined his troops at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and conducted them by rail to Grand Island, and marched thence by the way of Fort Hartsuff to the site of the new post, where he exercised the command until June, 1881, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until December. He was then assigned to the school of application at Fort Leavenworth, where he is now serving as Executive officer.

Hart, Verling K. Born in Indiana. Was appointed from that State a captain in the Nineteenth Infantry October 30, 1861. He was assigned in February, 1862, to the first battalion of that regiment; commanded his company until July, when he was assigned to recruiting service, having stations at Richmond, Ind., and Quincy, Ill., until February, 1863. He then rejoined his company at Murfreesboro', Tenn.; participated in the Chattanooga campaign; served at Elk River Bridge, Camp Scribner, and Stevenson, Ala.; was engaged in the action at Hoover's Gap and the battle of Chickamauga, where he was captured and held as a prisoner of war until December, 1864, when he made his escape to the National lines, and was granted a leave of absence until February, 1865. He was then employed on recruiting service at Detroit and Newport Barracks until he was transferred to the Thirty-seventh Infantry, to date from September 21, 1866. He was made a brevet major, to date from September 20, 1863, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Chickamauga, and a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion. He was transferred to the Third Infantry, by consolidation, to date from August 11, 1869, and was afterwards transferred to the Seventh Cavalry, to date from January 1, 1871. He served from 1866 to 1871 in the Indian Territory, Kansas, Colorado, and New Mexico, having stations at Forts Gibson, Arbuckle, Harker, Wingate, Garland, and Larned. He joined the Seventh Cavalry at Fort Harker, Kan., in January, 1871, and after a leave of absence rejoined at Chester, S. C.; served with his company in North Carolina, having stations at Rutherfordton, Lincolnton, and Charlotte until March 15, 1873, when he was ordered to the Department of Dakota. He arrived at Yankton on April 11, 1873, whence he marched with a battalion of his regiment to Fort Rice, where he arrived on the 10th of June. He marched from that station, ten days later, with the Yellowstone expedition, and upon arrival at the river his company was detached with other troops for the purpose of establishing and guarding a supply camp at what was known as "the stockade." He continued to serve with the main column until the 10th of September, when he rejoined his company and marched to Fort Abraham Lincoln, and thence to Fort Rice for winter quarters. He served with the expedition of 1874 to the Black Hills of Dakota, which started from Fort Abraham Lincoln on the 2d of July and returned on the 30th of August, when he again marched to Fort Rice for winter quarters. He availed himself of a sick-leave of absence in July, 1875, and while thus absent was promoted a major in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from December 2, 1875. He was on special duty in connection with the Centennial Exposition of 1876 until the 19th of December, when he was ordered to join the regiment in the Department of the Platte. He arrived at Fort McPherson, Neb., January 14, 1877, where he served until June, when he was ordered to Northern Wyoming for field service with a battalion of the regiment, and continued on that duty until December, when he was assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, where he had station until the next May; he was employed in January, 1878, with a detachment of the regiment in the capture of a band of disaffected Bannock Indians at the Ross Fork Agency in Idaho. He accompanied a battalion of the regiment in May, 1878, to Northern Wyoming, and served with it until October, when he was assigned to Fort McKinney, where he arrived in November, and commanded the station until August, 1879. He was then ordered to Cheyenne on general court-martial service, and thereafter availed himself of a leave of absence until November, when he joined a detachment of the regiment at Rawlins and accompanied it to Fort D. A. Russell, where he served until April 29, 1880, when he was transferred to Fort Laramie, where he arrived on the 2d of May, and had station until June, 1882, when he was assigned to the command of Fort Washakie, Wyo. He availed himself, in September, of a leave of absence for three months, and is now assigned, upon the expiration of his leave of absence, to the command of Fort McKinney, Wyo.

Sumner, Edwin V. Born at Carlisle, Pa. He was engaged in civil pursuits when the Government called for volunteers to suppress the Rebellion, and at once offered his services as first sergeant of Company B, in a battalion known as the "Clay Guards," which was organized in April, 1861, at Washington, D. C., for duty at the White House, the United States treasury, and other public buildings. He was appointed, from at large, a second lieutenant in the First Dragoons (now First Cavalry), August 5, 1861, and was promoted, in his regiment, a first lieutenant November 12, 1861, and a captain September 23, 1863. He declined the appointment of major in the Second California Cavalry, September 10, 1861. He served in the defenses of Washington during the winter of 1861-62, and in the Manassas and Virginia Peninsular campaigns as an aide-de-camp to Brigadier-General George Stoneman, chief of cavalry of the Army of the Potomac, and was engaged in the skirmish at Cedar Run, the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg, and served with the advance-guard of the Army of the Potomac during the movement toward Richmond, and was engaged in almost daily skirmishes with the enemy, notably at Slatersville, White House, New Bridge, and Mechanicsville, and in the seven days' battle during the change of base to the James River. He participated in the closing operations of the Maryland campaign, and served with General Stoneman, as an aide-de-camp, of the Third Army Corps, at Poolsville, Md., and was engaged in the battle of Fredericksburg, and accompanied the general, April and May, 1863, in his celebrated raid towards Richmond. He was appointed an additional aide-de-camp of volunteers with the rank of major, to date from May 19, 1863, and continued to serve with the Third Army Corps until September, when he was honorably discharged from that grade, to date from August, 1863. He then joined his regiment, and served during the winter of 1863-64 on the line of the Rapidan, and until after the battles in the Wilderness, and was engaged at Culpepper Court-House, Mine Run, and in several affairs on the Rappahannock and the Rapidan, and in General Grant's first campaign in the Wilderness, including the battle of Todd's Tavern, where he was twice wounded, and compelled to retire from the field. He returned to duty in July, 1864, and served for a time in the Cavalry Bureau, and afterwards as a special inspector of cavalry in the Army of the Shenandoah. He was appointed colonel of the First New York Mounted Rifles, to date from September 8, 1864, and served with the Army of the James until the end of the war, and was engaged in several actions on the lines in front of Richmond. His regiment was selected in March, 1865, by General Grant to cut the railroad communication between the left of the National army at Petersburg and General Johnston's army in North Carolina. He crossed the Chowan River and cut the railroad at Weldon, and had an engagement with the enemy near Jackson. The battles about Petersburg and Five Forks were then taking place, and his brilliant movement did not become so conspicuous as it deserved to be; but his success would have proved of the utmost importance if the National forces had been unsuccessful in these battles, as the movement was planned and carried into execution to guard against such a possible result. He was assigned, after the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, to the command of a district in Virginia, which he exercised until he was mustered out of the volunteer service, to date from November 29, 1865. He was made a brevet major, to date from May 6, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Todd's Tavern; a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion; and a brevet brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services in the field. He received, on several occasions, complimentary mention in the reports of General Stoneman, and was recommended by General Ord, commanding the Army of the James, for a brigadier-general of volunteers. He joined his company on the Pacific coast in April, 1866, where he served (except two years of recruiting service at Carlisle and New York) nearly fourteen years. He had stations at Drum Barracks, Camp Independence, Presidio of San Francisco, and Fort Lapwai; participated in the Modoc, Nez Percés, and Bannock wars, and in the campaign in Southeast Nevada. He served during the Modoc campaign of 1872-73 as an acting assistant adjutant-general and aide-de-camp for Brevet Major-General Jefferson C. Davis, and thereafter for one year as an acting assistant inspector-general on the staff of Brigadier-General Oliver O. Howard. He operated, during the Nez Percés campaign of 1877, near Mt. Idaho, with Major John Green's command, and was engaged during the Bannock campaign of 1878 in the combat at Blue Mountain, Idaho. He was promoted a major in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from March 4, 1879, and joined the Regiment at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., on the 17th of July, serving at the station until the 1st of October, when he marched to the relief of the besieged troops on Mill Creek, Col., and participated in raising the siege and action at that place on the 5th of October. He then marched to White River, Col., where he was assigned to the command of a battalion of the regiment, and encamped there until the 27th of December, when he availed himself of a leave of absence; he rejoined at Fort D. A. Russell in March, 1880, and in May was assigned to the command of Fort Robinson, Neb., which he retained until December, when he availed himself of a leave of absence, and soon thereafter was assigned to general court-martial service in New York City, which continued until June, 1881, when he rejoined his station, where he is now serving as post commander.

Captains.

Adam, Emil. Born in Germany and emigrated at an early age to the United States; the Alton (Ill.) Yagers, of which he was a member, having tendered their services to the government at the beginning of the war of the rebellion, were accepted at Springfield on the 25th of April, 1861, as a company of the Ninth Illinois Volunteers; he was then appointed a second lieutenant, and served during the period of enlistment (three months) at Cairo, and participated in a few reconnoissances into Kentucky and Missouri; when his regiment was mustered into the service of the United States on the 28th of July, for three years, he was promoted a first lieutenant, and marched from Cairo to Paducah, Kentucky, where he served on provost-guard duty until September, when he was appointed acting assistant adjutant-general of the second brigade of the forces under the command of Brigadier-General Charles F. Smith, and continued to serve in that position until he was promoted a captain, to date from November 14, 1861. He continued to serve at Paducah until January, 1862, when he participated in the Tennessee campaign and was engaged in the movement against Fort Henry and the capture of Forts Heiman and Donelson. He then conducted a captured Tennessee regiment to Lafayette, Ind., and rejoined the army in time to participate, although on sick-report, in the battle of Shiloh, where he was dangerously wounded. His company had forty-two men killed and wounded, and his regiment, with six hundred men in action, had three hundred and forty-eight killed and wounded, which was altogether the heaviest loss sustained by any National regiment on the field of Shiloh. He rejoined his company from a wounded furlough May 29, 1862, and marched with the advance the day before the evacuation of Corinth, and, after returning from the pursuit of the enemy, served near that place until July. He was then employed at Burnsville until October in guarding the railroad, when he was moved to the railroad bridge three miles from Corinth, where he served on outpost duty during the battle of the 3d and 4th. He was then stationed at Glendale until December, when he rejoined his regiment at Rienzi and served near Corinth until April, 1863, when his regiment was mounted and attached to the second division of the Sixteenth Corps, Army of the Tennessee, and employed in making raids inside of the enemy's lines. He was actively employed in Alabama and Mississippi until the end of 1863, and was engaged in the action at Cherokee and Lundy's Lane on the 17th of April (where he received a painful wound), and in the combats and skirmishes at Town Creek, Florence, Hamburg, Mud Creek, Rocky Run, Athens, Decatur, Morrisville, and other affairs of less importance. He was conspicuous for a successful defense of Athens, Ala., on the 26th of January, 1864, where the enemy, about eight hundred strong with two guns, under General Roddy, attacked him at three o'clock, A.M., for the purpose of capturing the government stores at that place and diverting attention from a movement having for its object the destruction of a railway trestle six miles to the rear on the Nashville road. Having been warned of the contemplated movement, he met the enemy on the west side of the town with about one hundred men deployed as skirmishers, and, although driven back by overwhelming numbers, he successfully delayed their advance and by excellent management so impressed the enemy with the belief that they had unexpectedly encountered a superior force that they abandoned the enterprise and retreated across the Tennessee River. General Roddy's report of the affair as published in a Southern newspaper said that after half an hour's hard fighting he succeeded in driving the National troops from their encampment to the east side of the town, when he was compelled by the arrival of reinforcements to retire, having suffered a loss of seventeen men killed and wounded. Captain Adam received the special thanks of Major-General G. M. Dodge for his gallant and valuable services in holding the town, preventing the capture of the government stores, and frustrating the attempt to destroy the trestle-work, which, if it had been accomplished, would have seriously interfered with the operations of the National army. He was actively employed during the spring of 1864 upon raids and reconnoissances on the Tennessee River, and on the 8th of March led the advance of his regiment across the river and bivouacked in the streets of Decatur, and the next day engaged the enemy at Courtland, and again, on the 10th, at Nancy Creek. He then returned to Decatur, where a supply station was established, and was employed until May in making reconnoissances within the enemy's lines, and was engaged at Moulton on the 26th of March, and again at the same place on the 29th, where the enemy proved too strong for the command and forced him to retreat with some loss. His regiment had now gained an enviable reputation for dash and audacity in penetrating the enemy's lines, and unusual efforts were made, without success, to entrap and capture it. He moved, in May, 1864, from Decatur to Chattanooga and participated in the Atlanta campaign, and was engaged, on the 13th, in an affair (commanding) on the Dalton road, where, after a sharp combat, he defeated the enemy. He was then employed on foraging expeditions until late in June, when he rejoined his regiment and participated in the closing operations at Kenesaw Mountain, and was engaged with the enemy, as advance-guard, on the 4th of July, at Nickajack Creek, and on the 20th he safely conducted an ammunition train from Roswell to Atlanta, although a battle was then in progress about Decatur and shells from the enemy's batteries hit several of the leading wagons in the train. His term of service having expired, he started from near Atlanta on the 28th of July for Springfield, Ill., where he was honorably discharged, to date from August 20, 1864. He then returned to his home at Alton, and, for the purpose of securing a commission, enlisted on the 1st of September in the One Hundred and Forty-fourth Illinois Volunteers, which was organizing under special authority from the War Department, and was appointed a captain, to date from September 10, 1864. He was then stationed at Alton on prison-guard duty until January, 1865, when he was transferred, with four companies, to St. Louis, where he served on provost-guard duty (promoted a major March 18, 1865) until July, when his regiment was concentrated at Springfield, where he was again honorably discharged, to date from July 14, 1865. He returned to Alton and engaged in civil pursuits until January, 1867, when, having accepted an appointment as a first lieutenant in the Thirty-ninth Infantry, to date from July 28, 1866, he reported for duty in the Department of Louisiana and served near New Orleans, at Ship Island, and Fort St. Philip until April 20, 1869, and was promoted a captain, to date from May 31, 1867. When his regiment was consolidated with the Fortieth Infantry (present Twenty-fifth Infantry) he was placed on the list of unassigned officers and served on reconstruction duty in Virginia and Mississippi, and on recruiting service at St. Louis, Fort Leavenworth, and Madison, Wis., until December 15, 1870, when he was assigned, with his original rank, to the Fifth Cavalry, and joined his company at Fort Sidney, Neb., in February, 1871, where he served until November, when he changed station to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and on the 12th of December he accompanied the second detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in January, 1872, where he served until June, when he entered upon a tour of field service which continued until February, 1873, and was engaged in the brilliant combat at Muchos Cañons and in the affairs on the Santa Maria and Sycamore Creek; in Hell Cañon and the Red Rock country, and on Pinto Creek. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet major, to date from September 25, 1872, for gallant conduct in the engagement at Muchos Cañons. He had stations at Camps Grant, McDowell, and Apache, the San Carlos Agency, and Camp Lowell until May, 1875, when he marched with the headquarters of the regiment to Fort Lyon, Col., and thence to Camp Supply, I. T., where he arrived in July and served until October. He then availed himself of a leave of absence and rejoined his company at Camp Supply in April, 1876, where he served until July, when he proceeded to Fort Laramie and participated in the campaigns against the hostile Sioux in the Black Hills of Wyoming and in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak. He was assigned upon the disbandment of the expedition in October, to Fort McPherson, Neb., where he served until July, 1877, when he was dispatched to Chicago for duty during the railroad riots in that city. He commanded a battalion of the Fifth Cavalry in the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés during September and October, '77. He was then assigned to Fort McKinney, Wyo., where he had station until October, 1879, when he conducted seven companies, by the way of Rock Creek, to Rawlins, Wyoming, where he joined the reserve of the Ute expedition and served at that place until the 29th of November. He was then assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, and soon thereafter availed himself of a leave of absence until May, 1880, when he rejoined his company at Fort Sidney, Neb., where he had station until March, 1882, when he proceeded to Omaha, in command of three companies, to assist in maintaining order during the labor riots in that city. Upon the completion of this duty he returned to Fort Sidney, where he is now serving as a company commander.

Hamilton, John M. Born in Ontario, Canada. He was engaged in business pursuits in Geneva, N. Y., at the beginning of the war of the Rebellion, and enlisted in the Thirty-third New York Volunteers on the 1st of May, 1861, and in September was appointed a corporal and assigned to the color-guard, and served in that position until he was discharged. His regiment formed a part of the Third Brigade of the Second Division, Fourth Army Corps, until May, 1862, when it was transferred to the Sixth Army Corps, and served with that corps until it was mustered out of service. He served in the defenses of Washington during the winter of 1861-62; participated in the Manassas, Virginia Peninsular, Maryland, and Rappahannock campaigns, and was engaged in the siege of Yorktown, the skirmish near Lee's Mill, the battles of Williamsburg and Gaines' Mill, the skirmishes at Savage Station and in the White Oak Swamp, the closing operations of the second battle of Bull Run, and the battles of South Mountain, Antietam, and Fredericksburg. He served during the winter of 1862-63 near Fredericksburg, Va., and was engaged in the battle of Marye's Heights (second Fredericksburg), where he was wounded on the 3d of May, 1863. He then returned to Geneva, where he was honorably discharged, to date from June 2, 1863, and engaged in civil pursuits until he was appointed a second lieutenant in the 9th United States Colored Troops, to date from December 24, 1863. He joined his regiment in Maryland and marched thence to South Carolina, and was engaged in the actions on John's Island, July 6-9, 1864. His regiment was then attached to the Army of the James and he was engaged in the combats at Deep Bottom and Flusser's Mill, Va., 14th-18th of August, and commanded a company in the charge, made by his regiment, against Fort Gilmer, Va., on the 29th of September, where he lost about a fourth of the company in killed and wounded. He served during the winter of 1864-65 on the Petersburg line of operations, and was employed on staff duty as property quartermaster of the 25th Army Corps, as provost-marshall of Russell's brigade of the corps, and subsequently as an aide-de-camp for Brevet Brigadier-General Charles S. Russell, commanding the brigade. He was promoted a first lieutenant May 15, 1865, and, soon after the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia, was transferred to Texas, where he served as an aide-de-camp and acting assistant inspector-general on a brigade staff of the Twenty-fifth

Army Corps, and afterwards, for seven months, as property ordnance officer, on the staff of Brigadier-General Getty, at Brownsville, where he was conspicuous for efficiency in securing and preserving the large quantity of government stores which had accumulated at that place. He was relieved from that duty in the fall of 1866 and ordered to join his regiment, then en route to Baltimore for muster-out of service; but upon arrival at New Orleans he was retained in service, by order of Major-General Sheridan, and assigned to duty in connection with the organization of the Ninth Cavalry. He organized several companies at New Orleans, and then conducted a squadron to Brownsville, Texas, the other five squadrons having stations at San Antonio. He continued to serve at Brownsville until he was appointed, from New York, a captain in the Thirty-Ninth Infantry, to date from June 6, 1867, and was highly commended for energy, capacity, and zealous discharge of important duties while serving with the Ninth Cavalry. He then proceeded to Louisville, where he was honorably discharged from volunteer service on the 20th of June, 1867, and accepted his commission in the Thirty-ninth Infantry. He was made a brevet captain of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion. He reported for duty in the Department of Louisiana in October, and served at Greenville Barracks, Fort Pike, and Baton Rouge until April 20, 1869, when his regiment was consolidated with the Fortieth Infantry (present Twenty-fifth Infantry), and he was placed on the list of unassigned officers and served on reconstruction duty in Virginia, having charge of Shenandoah and Warren counties, until August, 1869, when he was transferred to Mississippi and commanded the post of Corinth and had charge of Tishomingo County until the work of reconstruction was completed. He was then employed on recruiting service at New York and Brooklyn until December 15, 1870, when he was assigned, with his original rank, to the Fifth Cavalry, to date from December 30, 1870. He joined his company at Fort McPherson, Neb., in July, 1871, where he had station until November, when he accompanied the first detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in January, 1872, where he served until January, 1873. He participated in the winter campaign of 1873 against the Apache Indians and was engaged in the combat on Pinto Creek. He was then assigned to Camp Lowell, where he had station until October, 1874, and was employed on escort duty to Fort Yuma in May and June, 1873, and on field service in July and August, 1873. He was actively employed during the spring of 1874 in a campaign against the San Carlos Apache Indians, and commanded a detachment of the regiment in the affairs (five) in the Santa Teresa Mountains and near old Camp Pinal, the combats (two) in the Pinal Mountains, and in the affairs north of the San Carlos Agency and on the south side of Salt River near the Big Cañon. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet major, to date from April 9, 1873, for gallant conduct in the closing campaign against the Tonto-Apache Indians; and a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from April 17, 1874, for gallant conduct in the campaign against the San Carlos Apaches. He changed station, in October, 1874, to the San Carlos Agency, where he served until the 25th of November, when he conducted a party of military prisoners to Alcatraz Island, Cal., and then availed himself of a leave of absence until June, 1875, when he was assigned to temporary duty at Fort Riley, Kan., and employed in issuing supplies to destitute citizens until July, when he proceeded to Fort Wallace, Kan., and rejoined his company. He served at that station, having occasional tours of field service and commanding in the combat at Cañon Creek, Kan., October 27, 1875, until July, 1876, when he moved by rail to Cheyenne, whence he marched to Fort Robinson, Neb., and had station during the summer and fall months, and participated, on the 23d of October, in the capture of a Sioux village at Chadron Creek, Neb. He served with the Powder River expedition during the fall and winter of 1876, and was engaged in the brilliant action at Bates Creek (north branch of Powder River, Wyo.). Upon the disbandment of the expedition he was assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he arrived in January, 1877, and had station until June, 1878, and was employed on field service in Northern Wyoming during the summer of 1877, and commanded a battalion (five companies) of the regiment from May to July. He was employed during the summer of 1878 on field service (commanding a squadron) near the Ross Fork (Idaho) Indian Agency, and in November was assigned to Fort McPherson, Neb., where he had station (served as a member of a board of officers, in January and February, 1879, at Fort Robinson, to inquire into the cause of the outbreak of Cheyenne prisoners who had been confined at that post) until March, 1879, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until October. He then rejoined his company on White River, Col., and served with the Ute expedition until January, 1880, when he availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until August, 1880. He then rejoined his company at Fort Robinson, where he has since served as a company, and at times as a post, commander.

Kellogg, Sanford C. Born at Troy, New York. He enlisted, on the 29th of May, 1862, in the Thirty-seventh New York National Guards, and served as a private until September 2, 1862, when he was honorably discharged from the service. His regiment was stationed at Baltimore for the protection of the city against a threatened invasion of Maryland, but had no field service against the enemy. He was appointed, March 11, 1863, an aide-de-camp of volunteers with the rank of captain, and assigned to the staff of Major-General George H. Thomas, commanding the Fourteenth Corps, Army of the Cumberland. He reported for duty at Murfreesboro' in April, 1863, and served continuously as an aide-de-camp until the death of General Thomas at San Francisco, Cal., on the 28th of March, 1870, having meantime been appointed, from New York, a second lieutenant in the Eighteenth Infantry, to date from February 23, 1866. He was promoted in that regiment a first lieutenant, to date from May 15, 1866, and was mustered out of volunteer service to date from July 10, 1866. He was present at every battle in which General Thomas was engaged from April, 1863, to the end of the war of the Rebellion, among which may be named Hoover's Gap; the battles around Chattanooga, including Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, and Lookout Mountain; Buzzard's Roost, Resaca, Adairsville, Cassville, New Hope Church, Kenesaw Mountain, Peach Tree Creek, and the battles about Atlanta during August, 1864, ending with the battle of Jonesboro' and the occupation of Atlanta; the battle of Nashville and the pursuit of General Hood's army into Alabama. He was made a brevet major, a brevet lieutenant-colonel, and a brevet colonel of volunteers, to date from June 3, 1865, for faithful services and for gallant and meritorious services during the Atlanta campaign and at the battle of Nashville, and the following brevets in the regular army were afterwards conferred upon him, to date from March 2, 1867: a brevet captain for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Chattanooga; a brevet major for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Atlanta, and a brevet lieutenant-colonel for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Nashville. He was also commended by General Thomas, in an official report of January 20, 1865, to favorable consideration for important services after the Atlanta campaign and during the operations at Nashville. Upon the reduction of the army he was placed on the list of unassigned officers, to date from April 26, 1869, and so continued until December 15, 1870, when he was assigned, with his original rank, to the Fifth Cavalry. He served as acting judge-advocate of the Department of the Lakes and on the staff of Brigadier-General Cooke from June 1, 1870, to February 1, 1871, when he proceeded to Fort McPherson, Neb., where he joined the regiment on the 6th of February. He was promoted a captain, to date from January 11, 1871, and continued to serve at that station, having occasional tours of field service, until the 27th of November, 1871, when he moved with the first detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and while en route was ordered, on the 3d of December, to report at the headquarters of the Military Division of the Missouri, where he served on the staff of Lieutenant-General Sheridan until February 3, 1873, during which period he had station at Chicago, and participated in a reconnaissance of the Yellowstone River to the mouth of Powder River, and was engaged in several skirmishes with hostile Sioux during the movement. He rejoined his company in Arizona in April, 1873, and served at San Carlos Agency, Camps Grant and Apache, with occasional tours of field service, until May, 1874. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until November, when he rejoined at Camp Apache, where he had station until July, 1875. He then marched to Fort Lyon, Col., and proceeded thence by rail to Fort Gibson, I. T., where he arrived in September, and served until June, 1876, when he moved by rail to Cheyenne and participated in the campaigns against the hostile Sioux in the Black Hills of Wyoming, and in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the affair at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., and in the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak. Upon the disbandment of the expedition in October he was assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he had station until April, 1880, and was employed on field service in Northern Wyoming during the summer of 1877; in the capture of disaffected Indians at Ross Fork (Idaho) Agency in January, 1878; on field service in Idaho during the fall and summer of 1878; on leave of absence during the winter and spring of 1879, and in the Ute expedition during the fall and winter of 1879, and was engaged in raising the siege and action of Mill Creek, Col., and during the return march from White River had his right hand so severely frozen that he was compelled to submit to an amputation of two fingers. He changed station, in April, 1880, to Fort Laramie, where he served until July 10, 1881, when he was ordered with his company to Tongue River, Mont., there to await the arrival of the lieutenant-general of the army for escort duty to the Yellowstone Park. He returned from that duty to Fort Laramie, September 27, 1881, where he had station until June, 1882, when he was transferred to Fort McKinney, Wyo., where he has since served as a company, and at times as a post, commander.

Price, George F. Born in New York City, N. Y., and removed at an early age to California, where he was engaged in business pursuits at the beginning of the war of the Rebellion; he at once offered his services to the government, and was appointed a first lieutenant in the Second California Cavalry September 3, 1861, and was promoted a captain November 14, 1861; he served at Camp Alert, near San Francisco, from September, 1861, to May, 1862, when he was transferred to Nevada, and commanded an expedition which was dispatched to Truckee River to effect a treaty of peace with the Piute Indians; upon the successful completion of this duty he made an extended reconnaissance of the east side of the Sierra Nevada from Smoke Creek to Adobe Meadows, and received the thanks and congratulations of the department commander; he was then assigned to Fort Churchill, Nevada, where he served until August, when he marched with the Utah expedition to Ruby Valley, whence he was dispatched to Carson City to superintend the forwarding of army supplies from that place to Salt Lake City; upon the completion of this duty he rejoined his company at Fort Douglas, Utah, where he had station until May, 1863; he participated in a campaign against the Shoshone Indians in January, 1863, and was engaged in the brilliant action at Bear River, and in the combats (three) at Cedar Fort and Spanish Fork Cañon, and was commended in orders and reports for the courage and determination which he displayed during the action at Bear River, and for conspicuous gallantry in the combats at Spanish Fork Cañon ; he was then assigned to the command of Fort Bridger, and participated, in July, 1863, in the capture of Mopocha's band of Shoshones on the west side of the Wind River Mountains, which event marks the end of hostilities with that tribe ; and upon the termination of his duties at Fort Bridger he was complimented by the general commanding for the ability which he displayed in exercising his command and in dealing with the overland travel that passed his post during the summer ; he was employed during the summer of 1864 in making a wagon-road reconnaissance from Salt Lake City to El Dorado Cañon on the Colorado River ; during this movement he erected a monument over the grave of the victims of the Mountain Meadow massacre of 1857 ; his command suffered many privations for four months in that desert country, but he made a successful reconnaissance and gained much valuable information from that heretofore comparatively unknown region ; he served at Rush Valley and Fort Bridger from September, 1864, to March, 1865, when he was appointed acting assistant adjutant-general and acting assistant inspector-general of the District of the Plains, which embraced Nebraska, Utah, Wyoming, and parts of Colorado and Kansas, including Denver and Fort Leavenworth, and was in supervisory charge of the district during the absence of the general commanding on the Powder River expedition, and was commended as having occupied the position with ability and to the entire satisfaction of the general commanding the Division of the Missouri ; he also served as acting assistant adjutant-general of the District of Nebraska during October and November, 1865, and as an aide-de-camp and acting assistant adjutant-general for the general commanding the District of Utah from the 14th of January to the 30th of April, 1866, and was recommended for brevet commissions for gallantry in the action at Bear River and the combats at Cedar Fort and in Spanish Fork Cañon ; but the recommendation was not favorably considered, because the services were rendered in the Indian country during the war of the Rebellion ; he received, however, in recognition of his services, in connection with other officers serving in Utah, a joint resolution of thanks of the Legislature of California ; was elected an honorary member of the Siskiyou (Cal.) Light Guards, and was appointed, from California, a second lieutenant in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from February 23, 1866, which was the first appointment made to the regular army from the volunteer forces which had served on the Pacific coast during the war of the Rebellion ; he continued to serve in volunteer commission until July 9, 1866, when he was honorably discharged at Fort Leavenworth ; he then proceeded to Washington, and, having reported at the headquarters of the regiment, was assigned to Nashville, Tenn., where he arrived in September, and commanded a company until he was promoted a first lieutenant, to date from July 31, 1866 ; he had a skirmish with guerrillas near Hartsville, Tenn., on the 17th of October, 1866, when in pursuit of a party charged with robbing a pay-car of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad ; he served as post-adjudant and judge-advocate of a general court-martial at Raleigh, N. C., from November, 1866, to June, 1867, when he was transferred to Kingston, and thence to Morganton and Asheville ; he served as quartermaster and commissary at Asheville, organized the registration boards in the counties of Western North Carolina, and was judge-advocate of a military commission at Salisbury ; his most important service during the reconstruction period was the preparation of a report upon the operations of a scaling law which had been enacted by the Legislature of North Carolina to govern the settlement, in gold coin or its equivalent, of private debts contracted in Confederate currency during the rebellion against the United States, and the principles announced in that report were subsequently adopted in general orders from the headquarters of the Second Military District as the rule to govern the civil courts in the Carolinas ; he was assigned, in February, 1868, to the staff of Brigadier-General E. R. S. Canby as assistant to the judge-advocate of the Second Military District, and served in that position until the civil governments of the Carolinas were established in accordance with the requirements of the acts of Congress ; during this period he was also employed as judge-advocate of military commissions at Camden and Columbia, and as military commissioner for the counties of Polk and Rutherford in North Carolina during the spring elections of 1868 ; and when the work of reconstruction was completed he was charged with the duty of transferring all unfinished civil cases in the office of the judge-advocate of the district to the attorney-general of the State in which they had originated ; he then availed himself of a leave of absence until January, 1869, when he reported at Fort Harker, Kan., and commanded a detachment of recruits at that station and in the field until April; he then rejoined his company at Fort Lyon, Col., and marched with a battalion of the regiment across the country to Fort McPherson, Neb., and was engaged en route in combats with hostile Sioux and Cheyennes at Beaver and Spring Creeks; he participated in the operations of the Republican River expedition from June to November, 1869 (commanded a company until the 19th of July, and thereafter served as adjutant of the expedition), and was engaged in the affairs near Spring Creek, in the sand-hills near Frenchman's Fork, at Rock Creek, in the brilliant action at Summit Springs (recommended for the brevet of captain for gallantry), in the affair in the sand-hills south of Julesburg, the Niobrara pursuit, and the affair on Prairie Dog Creek, where he won a special mention in the official report "as meriting the highest praise for dash and gallantry," and also for having, in connection with Lieutenant Volkmar, Fifth Cavalry, "undoubtedly saved the lives of Maj. Frank North (commanding the Pawnee scouts) and the guide, William Cody;" he served as adjutant of a battalion of the regiment en route from Fort McPherson to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., during November, 1869, and was battalion adjutant for seven companies at Fort D. A. Russell from April, 1870, to December, 1871, when he was detached from the regiment, then under orders for Arizona, and continued on duty at that station, with a detachment of men and horses, awaiting the arrival of the Third Cavalry from Arizona, until March, 1872, when he proceeded, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in June; he was appointed regimental quartermaster to date from May 1, 1872, and served at that station, in charge of construction of public buildings, until October, when, having been promoted a captain, to date from August 29, 1872, he joined his company at Camp Date Creek, where he served until December, when he participated in the Apache campaign of 1872-73, during which his command was engaged in the affairs (two) in Baby Cañon, at Indian Run, in Red Rock Cañon, on Turkey Creek, north of Baby Cañon, and at the mouth of Baby Cañon; he then operated from Camp Verde, on the east side of the Rio Verde, by the way of Tonto Basin, on the east side of the Mazatzal and Salt River Mountains and the northeast side of the Pinal Mountains, to Camp Grant, having a combat en route on the east branch of the Rio

Verde. He returned to Camp Date Creek in March, 1873, and commanded the station until May. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet major, to date from January 1, 1873, for gallant conduct in the Tonto Basin. When in command of Camp Date Creek he was charged with making the necessary arrangements for the removal of the Apache-Yuma Indians to the Verde Reservation, and upon the completion of the duty received the thanks of the department commander for the successful manner in which the movement was begun and for the judicious execution of his instructions. He commanded Camp McDowell from the 27th of May to the 19th of June, 1873, when he was selected to take charge of the reconnaissance and construction of the military telegraph line from San Diego to Prescott and Tucson, and was employed upon that duty until December, when the entire line was completed. He was then ordered to San Francisco to superintend the preparation of the cartography pertaining thereto, and upon the completion of the duty in April, 1874, availed himself of a leave of absence until April, 1875, when he returned to San Francisco, and proceeded thence, by the way of San Diego, Tucson, and Fort Bayard, to Fort Cummings, N. M., where he joined the headquarters of the regiment and marched up the Rio Grande to Santa Fé, where he rejoined his company on the 8th of June, and marched thence, by the way of Fort Union, to Fort Lyon, Col., and moved thence by rail to Fort Hays, Kan., where he arrived on the 29th of June, and had station, with occasional tours of field service, until the 17th of July, 1876, when he moved by rail to Cheyenne, Wyo., and while marching thence to Fort Laramie was intercepted at Chug Water by a dispatch which directed him to join the regiment in the field. He made forced marches and joined on the north branch of the North Cheyenne River, and participated in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak. Upon the disbandment of the expedition in October at Fort Robinson he was assigned to Fort McPherson, where he had station until July, 1877, and was detached from December 21, 1876, to January 13, 1877, on escort duty (commanding) with two and a half million dollars, government funds, in transit from Omaha to San Francisco, and returned to Omaha with four million dollars in gold coin. He served at Omaha during the railroad riots of July, 1877; participated in the operations of the Wind River expedition against the Nez Perces during September and October, 1877, and upon the disbandment of the expedition was assigned to Fort McKinney, Wyo., where he served until January, 1878, when he was assigned to general court-martial service at Forts Fetterman and D. A. Russell until March, when he availed himself of a leave of absence and visited Europe. He returned to the United States in September, and rejoined his company at Fort McKinney in October, 1878, where he had station until October, 1879, when he marched to Rock Creek, and moved thence by rail to Rawlins, Wyo., and joined the reserve of the Ute expedition, and served at that place (escorted Paymaster Stanton to White River) until the 29th of November, when he was assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, where he served until April 27, 1880. He then marched to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he arrived on the 1st of May, and had station until March, 1882, having tours of detached service as judge-advocate at Salt Lake City in November, 1880, and at Fort D. A. Russell in April, 1881; conducting a detachment of recruits to San Francisco, Cal., in September, 1881; on duty at the headquarters of the Military Division of the Pacific from the 14th of September to the 7th of December, 1881, purchasing cavalry horses; and as judge-advocate at Rock Creek, Wyo., in February, 1882. He availed himself of a leave of absence from March to September, 1882, when he joined the regimental headquarters at Fort Sidney and was selected for a tour of recruiting service. He reported at Jefferson Barracks on the 1st of October, 1882, and was assigned to New York City, where he is now serving.

Hayes, Edward M. Born in New York. He enlisted in August, 1855, as a musician in the mounted service, and was stationed at Carlisle and Jefferson Barracks until December, 1856, when he was assigned to the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, and joined his company at Camp Cooper, Tex., in February, 1857, and participated in the combat at the head-waters of the Brazos River, the brilliant actions at Wichita Village, and at Small Creek, a tributary of the Nescutunga, the operations of the Wichita expedition of 1858-59, and was specially mentioned in department general orders for good conduct in the affair at Pecan Bayou in January, 1860. Upon the expiration of his enlistment he returned to his home in Ohio, where he attended school until April, 1861. He then entered the military telegraph service, and was assigned to the national army in West Virginia, and was engaged in the battle of Rich Mountain, the capture of Pe-gram's forces and the town of Beverly. He then served at Clarksburg, Buchanan, and other places in West Virginia until the spring of 1862, and had charge, as a volunteer, of two guns at the repulse of the enemy near Fairmont. He was then attached to Mitchell's division of General Buell's army at Huntsville, Ala., and was severely wounded in a skirmish near Fayetteville, Tenn., August 27, 1862, during the retreat towards Louisville, Ky. He was appointed a second lieutenant of Ohio Cavalry, to date from October 9, 1862, and was mustered into the service of the United States as a first lieutenant of the Tenth Ohio Cavalry, to date from January 15, 1863, and served in that grade until March 24, 1864, when he was promoted to a captaincy in his regiment. He served with the cavalry corps of the Army of the Cumberland, and participated with his regiment in the action at Liberty Gap and in many cavalry skirmishes about Murfreesboro' during the winter and spring of 1863. Upon the reorganization of the cavalry corps his regiment was assigned to the Third Division, and he participated in General Sherman's campaigns to the end of the war. He served as an aide-de-camp for General Kilpatrick from May, 1864, to July, 1865, and participated in the battles at Resaca (wounded), the raid around the Confederate army at Atlanta, and in the battles and engagements at Lovejoy's Station, Waynesboro⁷, Jonesboro', Macon, Griswold, and Savannah, Ga.; Aiken, S. C.; Monroe Cross-Roads, Averysboro', and Bentonville, N. C.; and was present at the surrender of General Johnston's army at Durham Station, N. C., April 26, 1865. The campaigns in Georgia and the Carolinas were marked by many cavalry skirmishes and engagements, in which he participated as an aide-de-camp for General Kilpatrick. He was made a brevet major of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the campaigns in Georgia and the Carolinas, and was mustered out of service, to date from July 24, 1865. He was appointed, from New Jersey, a second lieutenant in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from February 23, 1866, and was in charge of ordnance and commissary stores at Harper's Ferry from May to August. He then joined his company at Winchester, Va., and served as commissary and quartermaster until December, when, having been promoted a first lieutenant, to date from August 20, 1866, he was assigned to reconstruction duty in North Carolina, and served at Raleigh, Fort Hatteras (commanding), and Morganton (commissary and quartermaster) until September, 1868, when he was transferred to frontier service and participated, as quartermaster of a battalion of the regiment from October, 1868, to April, 1869, in the campaigns against the hostile Sioux and Cheyennes in Kansas, Colorado, and the Indian Territory, and was engaged, in October, 1868, in the affairs on Prairie Dog Creek, Shuter Creek, and the north branch of Solomon River. He then availed himself of a leave of absence, and rejoined his company at Fort McPherson, Neb., and served as quartermaster of the Republican River expedition from the 9th of June to the 24th of August, 1869, and was engaged in the affair at Rock Creek, the brilliant action at Summit Springs, the affair in the sand-hills south of Julesburg, and in the Niobrara pursuit. He was appointed regimental quartermaster, to date from June 22, 1869, and served in that position and as quartermaster at Fort McPherson until May 1, 1872. He commanded a detachment of the regiment in an affair with hostile Sioux at Birdwood Creek, Neb., May 24, 1871, and was quartermaster of the escort for Lieutenant-General Sheridan and the Grand Duke Alexis of Russia in the Republican River Valley during January, 1872. When the first detachment of the regiment moved, in November, 1871, to Arizona, he was retained at Fort McPherson until April, 1872, in charge of enlisted men and horses awaiting the arrival of the Third Cavalry. He was then appointed an aide-de-camp for Brevet Major-General William H. Emory, commanding the Department of the Gulf, and served at New Orleans until April, 1875, when he was promoted a captain, to date from August 15, 1874. He then reported at Fort Leavenworth, and while awaiting the arrival of his company from Arizona served as quartermaster for a battalion of the Sixth Cavalry en route from Fort Lyon to Santa Fé, and returned with the first battalion of the regiment to Fort Lyon, where he joined his company in September, 1875, and conducted it to Camp Supply, I. T., where he had station, with occasional tours of field service, until June 9, 1876, when he proceeded to Cheyenne, Wyo., and served during the operations against the hostile Sioux in the Black Hills of Wyoming, and with the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the affair at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., and the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak. Upon the disbandment of the expedition at Fort Robinson, Neb., in October, he was assigned to Fort McPherson, Neb., where he had station until August, 1877, being detached at Chicago during the railway riots of July, '77. He then changed station to Fort Washakie, Wyo., where he served (commanding post and company) until September, 1878. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until July, 1879, when he was appointed recorder of a board of officers convened at Washington, D. C., to examine candidates for superintendents of national cemeteries, and continued on that duty until June, 1880, when he rejoined his company at Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he had station until May, 1882, when he was transferred to Fort Washakie, Wyo., where he is now serving as a company commander.

Payne, J. Scott. Born in Virginia. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 18th of June, 1866, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted, in the regiment, a first lieutenant May 23, 1867. He joined his company at Washington, D. C., on the 2d of October, where he had station until April, 1867. He was then assigned to reconstruction duty in the Southern States, and served in Alabama and Tennessee, having stations at Montgomery, Demopolis, Nashville, and Knoxville, until the 12th of September, 1868, when he resigned his commission and located at Knoxville, Tenn., where he engaged in the practice of law. He also served as United States commissioner for the United States Circuit Court, District of East Tennessee, 1871-73, and was associate editor of the Knoxville Daily Whig from October, 1869, to February, 1870, and editor of the Knoxville Daily Whig and Register during 1870-71. He was reappointed a second lieutenant in the Sixth Cavalry, to date from February 3, 1873. He joined his regiment in Kansas, and had stations at Forts Dodge, Lyon, and Wallace, and participated in field operations in Kansas and Texas until September, 1874, and was engaged in a combat with hostile Cheyennes, Kiowas, and Comanches on Red River, Texas, August 30, 1874, and served as adjutant for Major Biddle's battalion of the Sixth Cavalry. He was transferred, by act of Congress of June 23, 1874, to the Fifth Cavalry as a first lieutenant with his original rank, and joined at Camp McDowell, A. T., in February, 1875. He commanded a company at that station and en route, by the way of Camp Verde and Fort Wingate, to Santa Fé until June, when, having been promoted a captain, to date from June 4, 1875, he joined his company and conducted it from Fort Union, N. M., to Fort Dodge, Kan., where he arrived on the 10th of July, and served, commanding company and post, with occasional tours of field service, until July 17, 1876. He then proceeded by rail to Cheyenne, and while marching thence to Fort Laramie was intercepted at Chug Water by a dispatch which directed him to join the regiment then in the field. He made forced marches and joined on the north branch of the North Cheyenne River, and served with the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak. Upon the disbandment of the expedition at Fort Robinson, Neb., in October, he was assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he had station until January, 1878, and was engaged in the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés during September and October, 1877, and in the capture of disaffected Bannack Indians at Ross Fork (Idaho) Agency, in January, 1878. He was then assigned to Fort Fred Steele, Wyo., where he served until March, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until June. He then rejoined his company and served with a battalion of the regiment in Northern Wyoming until December, and soon thereafter availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until July, 1879, when he conducted a detachment of recruits to Cheyenne, and rejoined his company at Fort D. A. Russell on the 28th of August. He was ordered, in September, to field service against the disaffected Utes of Colorado, and, joining Major Thornburgh's command at Fort Fred Steele, participated in the march towards the agency on White River, during which occurred the memorable and disastrous action and siege at Milk Creek, Col., 29th of September-5th of October, 1879, where he exercised the command (being twice wounded) after the death of Major Thornburgh, who fell early in the engagement, and until the arrival, five days thereafter, of Captain Dodge, Ninth Cavalry. The occasion was one demanding the exercise of the highest qualities an officer can possess, and his conduct during the prolonged defense, under the most disheartening circumstances, was beyond praise, while the records of the army afford no brighter instance of gallant and zealous devotion to duty. He was thanked and complimented in orders, letters, and reports of Generals Sherman, Sheridan, and Crook for distinguished services, and also received the thanks, by joint resolution, of the sixth Legislative Assembly of Wyoming Territory for his bravery, heroic conduct, and efficient services during the engagement and subsequent siege. He returned to duty with his company at Fort D. A. Russell on the 29th of November, and in January, 1880, was summoned to Washington to testify before a Congress-sional committee concerning the causes which led to the Ute outbreak. He returned to his station in February, where he served until April, when he was transferred to Fort Niobrara, in Northern Nebraska, where he served as a company, and at times as a post, commander until August 10, 1862, when he proceeded by rail to Fort D. A. Russell, where he had station until November 12, 1882, when he was transferred to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he is now serving as a company commander.

Woodson, Albert E. Born in Kentucky. He removed in 1859 to Washington Territory, where he engaged in civil pursuits and was for a time the private secretary of the governor of the Territory. He enlisted, May 27, 1862, in the First Washington Territory Volunteers, and served as a private and hospital steward until April 14, 1863. He was then appointed a second lieutenant in his regiment, and served at Forts Walla Walla and Vancouver until March 25, 1865, when he was mustered out of service and returned to civil pursuits. He was appointed, from Idaho Territory, a first lieutenant in the Thirty-sixth Infantry, to date from August 5, 1867, and served at Fort Sanders (employed during the summer of 1868 on escort duty with engineers of the Union Pacific Railway), Forts Bridger and Douglas, until May 19, 1869, when, his regiment having been consolidated with the Seventh Infantry, he was placed on the list of unassigned officers and served as commissary at the Whetstone Indian Agency and on recruiting service at Sioux City until November, 1870. He was highly complimented by the commissary-general of subsistence for faithful and efficient services at the Whetstone Agency, where he discharged the duties of his office in a satisfactory and business-like manner. He was assigned, December 15, 1870, to the Fifth Cavalry with his original rank, and joined at Fort McPherson, Neb., on the 10th of March, 1871, where he had station until November, when he accompanied the first detachment of the regiment (commanding company), by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in January, 1872, whence he marched, in April, to Camp Verde, where he had station until March, 1873. He commanded a company during the Apache campaigns of 1872-73, and was engaged in the affairs at the Mexican crossing of the Verde River and on the west side of the Verde River south of Camp Verde, and was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet captain, to date from December 31, 1872, for gallant conduct in an engagement with the Apache-Mojave Indians in the Red Rock country. He was a member of a board of officers convened at Los Angeles for the purchase of cavalry horses, from April to May, 1873. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until February, 1874, when he was placed on duty at the headquarters of the Military Division of the Pacific, and finally rejoined at Camp Grant in April, where he served as a company commander and commissary until July, 1875. He then conducted a detachment (D, H, L) of the regiment from Arizona to Fort Lyon, Col., where he arrived in September, and served, with occasional tours of field service, until July, 1876, when he moved by rail to Cheyenne to participate in the Sioux campaign in Northern Wyoming, Dakota, and Montana. He was promoted a captain July 1, 1876, and joined his company on the north branch of the North Cheyenne River and served with the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak. Upon the disbandment of the expedition at Fort Robinson, Neb., in October, he was assigned to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he had station until August, 1877, being detached at Omaha during the railway riots of July, 1877. He then changed station to Fort Washakie, Wyo., where he served until May, 1878, and was engaged in the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés during September, 1877. He was then employed on field service in Northern Wyoming until July, when he was assigned to Fort McKinney. He availed himself, in September, 1878, of a leave of absence until February, 1879, when he was appointed recorder of a retiring board convened at New York City, and continued on that duty until September, when he resumed his leave of absence; but having been informed of the military operations against the hostile Utes of Colorado, he rejoined his company at Rawlins, Wyo., on the 17th of October, and served with the reserve of the Ute expedition until the 29th of November. He was then assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he served until April, 1880, when he changed station to Fort Laramie, where he has since served, with occasional leaves of absence and tours of detached service, as a company, and at times as a post, commander.

Babcock, John B. Born in Louisiana, and was engaged in business pursuits at the beginning of the war of the Rebellion. He served as a sergeant in the Thirty-seventh New York National Guard from the 29th of May to the 2d of September, 1862, and was appointed a second lieutenant in the One Hundred and Seventy-fourth New York Volunteers November 13, 1862, and was promoted a first lieutenant December 1, 1863. He proceeded, in the fall of 1862, to the Department of the Gulf, and participated in the winter campaign preceding the siege of Port Hudson, including the first advance, March, 1863, when the ships of Admiral Farragut ran by the guns, and the affairs at Fosse Point and Plains' Store; the Port Hudson campaign, including the first and second assaults upon, and the siege of, Port Hudson, and was a volunteer for the storming party. He then participated in the Red River campaign, and was engaged in the battle of Sabine Cross-Roads, and was commended for conspicuous gallantry; the battle of Pleasant Hill (adjutant), where the regiment lost one hundred and twenty-one officers and men, and was again commended for conspicuous gallantry; the battle of Cane River, where he was highly commended by his brigade commander for leading the assault, and where his brilliant conduct contributed largely to the success of the National army; the siege of Alexandria and the engagement on Mansura Plains. His regiment was consolidated in June, 1864, with the One Hundred and Sixty-second New York Volunteers, and he served with the new organization as a first lieutenant until December 9, 1864, when he was promoted a captain, and on January 1, 1865, he was promoted a major. The new organization was transferred to the Army of the Potomac in front of Petersburg, and he participated in the engagements on the north side of the James River preceding the explosion of the mine. He then participated in the Shenandoah Valley campaign of 1864, and was engaged in the battle of Cedar Creek and other engagements and combats of less importance, and commanded his regiment upon several occasions. He was employed during the summer of 1865 as acting assistant adjutant-general of the District of Georgia, and until he tendered his resignation, which was accepted, to take effect July 23, 1865. He received the brevets of first lieutenant, captain, and major, to date from March 2, 1867, for gallant and meritorious services at the battles of Sabine Cross-Roads, Pleasant Hill, and Cane River Crossing, La., and was made a brevet lieutenant-colonel of New York Volunteers by the State of New York in recognition of gallant and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion. He was appointed, from Connecticut, a second lieutenant in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from January 22, 1867, and was promoted in the regiment, a first lieutenant February 14, 1868, and a captain May 9, 1877. He joined his company in South Carolina on the 17th of April, and served at Aiken and Edgefield until November, when he was transferred to Washington and served with the escort for General Grant until August, 1868. He then availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until November, when he joined a battalion of the regiment in Kansas and commanded a company during the campaigns against the hostile Sioux and Cheyennes until July 17, 1869. He served with the Canadian River expedition and in camp near Fort Lyon, Col., during the winter and spring of 1868-69, and while marching across the country to Fort McPherson, Neb., was engaged in May, 1869, in the combats with hostile Sioux and Cheyennes at Beaver and Spring Creeks. His company (M) was surrounded at Spring Creek by a large force of warriors under the famous Cheyenne chief, Tall Bull, but he successfully resisted their assaults until the arrival of the main column, when he participated in the vigorous pursuit which followed. He served with the Republican River expedition during June and July, 1869, and was engaged in the affair on the Republican River near Spring Creek, in the sand-hills near Frenchman's Fork, in repulsing a night attack of the enemy at Rock Creek, and in the brilliant action at Summit Springs. He then availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until April, 1870, when he rejoined at Fort McPherson, and served at that station, Plum Creek, North Platte, and Fort D. A. Russell until December, 1871. He then accompanied the second detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California to Arizona, and arrived at Camp Bowie in February, 1872, where he served until August, when he was transferred to Camp Grant, and thence, in April, 1873, to Camp Apache. He participated in the Apache campaigns of 1873-74, and was engaged in the combats northeast of the forks of Tonto Creek (slightly wounded), in the Sunflower Valley near the Four Peaks, at Wild Rye Creek, and near the headwaters of Cherry Creek. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from June 16, 1873, for gallant conduct in an engagement with Tonto-Apache Indians in Tonto Basin; and a brevet colonel, to date from January 16, 1874, for gallant conduct in an engagement with Apache Indians at Four Peaks. He served at San Carlos agency as a company commander, commissary, and quartermaster, from March to October, 1874, when he was selected for recruiting service, and had stations at Chicago and New York until December, 1876, when he rejoined at Fort McPherson, where he served as adjutant and company commander until May 9, 1877, when he joined his company, by promotion, at that station. He served at Chicago during the railway riots of July, 1877, and then availed himself of a leave of absence until November, when he rejoined his company at Fort McKinney, Wyo., where he had station, with a tour of field service to the Little Missouri River, until May, 1878. He was then employed on field service in Northern Wyoming until December, when he was assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he had station until April, 1880, and was employed on general court-martial duty at Salt Lake City in December, 1878, on field service in the sand-hills of Western Nebraska during January and February, 1879, in the Ute expedition during the fall and winter of 1879, and participated in raising the siege and action of Milk Creek, Col. He was transferred in April, 1880, to Camp Sheridan, Neb., and commanded the post until October, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until May, 1881. He then rejoined his company at Fort Robinson, Neb., where he has since served as a company, and at times as a post, commander.

Volkmar, William J. Born in Pennsylvania, and served during the Confederate invasion of his native State as a sergeant in the Thirty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers from the 19th of June to the 4th of August, 1863. Upon the recommendations of his captain and colonel, for gallant conduct in battle during the Gettysburg campaign, and of the faculty of the high school of Philadelphia, from which institution he holds the degrees of B.A. and M.A., he was appointed a cadet at the Military Academy, and was graduated on the 15th of June, 1868, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted in the regiment a first lieutenant March 19, 1870, and a captain April 2, 1879. He reported at Fort Harker, Kan., October 4, 1868, and was assigned to the command of a detachment of cavalry recruits, which he was employed in arming, equipping, and drilling until the 2d of November, when he accompanied the detachment to Fort Dodge, Kan., and was engaged en route in a combat (November 15) with Cheyenne Indians near Fort Larned. He was serving as an acting aide-de-camp for Colonel Sully, commanding the Indian Territory expedition, when he was ordered to join his company, then with another column, at Fort Wallace, Kan. He then served (commanding company) with the Canadian River expedition and in camp near Fort Lyon during the winter and spring of 1868-69, and while marching across the country with a battalion of the regiment (acting engineer officer) was engaged in May, 1869, in the combats with hostile Sioux and Cheyennes at Beaver and Spring Creeks, and narrowly escaped death in the combat at the latter place. He was recommended for the brevet of first lieutenant for conspicuous gallantry upon that occasion. He participated as acting engineer and signal officer in the operations of the Republican River expedition from June to November, 1869, and was engaged in the affair at Rock Creek, the brilliant action at Summit Springs (distinguished for gallantry and recommended for the brevet of captain), the affair in the sand-hills south of Julesburg, the Niobrara pursuit, and the affair on Prairie Dog Creek, where he won a special mention in the official report "as meriting the highest praise for dash and gallantry," and also for having, in connection with Lieutenant Price, Fifth Cavalry, "undoubtedly saved the lives of Major Frank North (commanding Pawnee scouts) and the guide, William Cody." He then served at Fort McPherson, where he was principally employed as acting engineer and signal officer, quartermaster and commissary until February, 1871. He then availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until May, when he joined his company at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and served at that station until December, 1871, when he accompanied the second detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in January, 1872, and was soon thereafter assigned, at the request of Brigadier-General Oliver O. Howard, to the difficult and dangerous duty of attempting, under a flag of truce, to open communication with the hostile Apaches. He was then employed in conducting recruits to Camps Grant, Lowell, and Apache, and served on general court-martial duty at Camp Apache until July, when he rejoined his company in the field near Camp Hualpai. He was selected in August, 1872, to command Camp Date Creek, where he rendered important and highly valuable services during the outbreak of the Apache-Yuma Indians on the 8th of September. He was selected in December, 1872, for recruiting service, and had stations at Cleveland, Philadelphia, and St. Louis, and was adjutant of the cavalry station at St. Louis Barracks until May, 1875, when he was assigned to temporary duty in the office of the chief engineer of the Department of Missouri. He served in that position until December, when he was appointed chief signal officer of the department, and was employed in giving instructions in military signaling and telegraphy until December, 1876, when he was appointed aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General Pope (now major-general). He continued in the discharge of the duties of these offices, and performed at intervals the duties of assistant adjutant-general, judge-advocate, and chief ordnance and engineer officer until after his promotion to a captaincy in the regiment, when he was relieved in July, 1879, from staff duty at his own request and joined his company at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo. He joined Major Thornburgh's command which was organized in September to operate against the disaffected Utes on White River, Col.; but before the command marched from Fort Fred Steele, Wyo., he was recalled by the lieutenant-general of the army for special duty at Chicago, Ill., as recorder of a board of officers which was convened to consider disputed matters relating to the battles of Chickamauga and Stone River. Before completing this duty, and in January, 1880, he was again appointed an aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General Pope, and served in that position at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., until June 6, 1881, when he was appointed an aide-de-camp (with the rank of lieutenant-colonel) for the lieutenant-general of the army, and is now serving in that position at Chicago, Ill.

Forbush, William C. Born in Massachusetts. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 15th of June, 1868, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted, in the regiment, a first lieutenant March 19, 1870, and a captain May 1, 1879. He joined his company at Fort Hays, Kan., on the 5th of October, and participated, during October and November, 1868, in a campaign against the hostile Sioux and Cheyennes on the western border of Kansas, and was engaged in the combats on Prairie Dog Creek, Shuter Creek (distinguished for gallantry and recommended for the brevet of first lieutenant), and the north branch of Solomon River. He served as an acting aide-de-camp for Major Carr during the Canadian River expedition, and in camp near Fort Lyon, Col., from December, 1868, to April, 1869, when he was appointed quartermaster of a battalion of the regiment en route to Fort McPherson, Neb., and was engaged in the combat with hostile Sioux and Cheyennes at Beaver Creek May 13, 1869. He served as adjutant of the regiment from July 12, 1869, to October 5, 1876, having stations at Fort McPherson, Neb., Camps McDowell and Lowell, A. T., and Fort Hays, Kan. He was acting assistant adjutant-general of the District of the Republican from July, 1869, to November, 1871; of the District of the Black Hills, June and July, 1876, and was engaged in the affair at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo.; of the cavalry corps of the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition from the 4th of August to the 8th of October, 1876, and was engaged in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak., and was commended in general orders for invaluable services and untiring zeal and efficiency as a staff officer under the most trying circumstances in the field. He was then selected for recruiting service, and was employed as adjutant at St. Louis Barracks until September, 1878, when he was relieved and joined at Fort McKinney, Wyo., in January, 1879, where he served as adjutant until May. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until October, when he joined his company at Fort Washakie, Wyo., where he served until May, 1880, when he changed station to Fort Robinson, Neb., where he arrived in June and served until January, 1881. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until June, 1881, when he rejoined his company at Fort Robinson, and a few days thereafter changed station to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he is now serving as a company commander.

Augur, Jacob A. (son of Brigadier-General C. C. Augur). Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 15th of June, 1869, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted, in the regiment, a first lieutenant January 11, 1871, and a captain June 14, 1879. He relinquished the graduating leave on the 7th of July and joined his company at Fort McPherson, Neb., on the 2d of August, and served with the Republican River expedition of 1869 and was engaged in the affair on Prairie Dog Creek. He was then assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and soon thereafter availed himself of a leave of absence until March, 1870, when he was attached for duty to Company K, en route from Washington, D.C., to the Department of the Platte, and rejoined his company in May at Pine Bluffs, Neb., where he served until August, when he marched to Fort D. A. Russell, where he had station until August 16, 1871, and was employed on escort duty with the Indian Commissioners to Fort Laramie and with an expedition from Fort McPherson to the Republican River during the fall of 1870. He was appointed, July 28, 1871, an aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General Augur, and served in that position from August 17, 1871, to June 30, 1878, when he was relieved at his own request. He had stations during this period at Omaha, San Antonio, and New Orleans, and in addition to his duties as an aide-de-camp, served as acting assistant adjutant-general for the Department of Texas from February 5, 1872, to May 6, 1873, and from November 1, 1873, to January 20, 1874; as acting engineer officer for the Department of Texas from July 22, 1873, to May 11, 1874; and as acting judge-advocate for the Department of the Gulf from January to July, 1878. He joined his company in the field in Northern Wyoming July 27, 1878, and was assigned, in December, to Fort D. A. Russell, where he had station until April, 1880, and was employed on field service in Western Nebraska during January and February, 1879, and in the Ute expedition during the fall and winter of 1879, and participated in raising the siege and action of Milk Creek, Col. He changed station, in April, 1880, to Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he has since served, with occasional leaves of absence and tours of detached service, as a company commander.

First Lieutenants.

Thomas, Earl D. Born in Illinois. He served during the war of the Rebellion as a private, corporal, and sergeant-major in the Eighth Illinois Cavalry from April 1, 1862, to April 23, 1865, when he was discharged from volunteer service, having accepted a cadet appointment to the Military Academy. He served with the Army of the Potomac and participated in the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg and in almost daily skirmishes with the enemy during the advance towards Richmond, in General Stoneman's raid towards Mechanicsville, in the seven days' battles ending in the evacuation of the Peninsula, the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, the actions at Darnestown and Boonsboro', the cavalry campaign in London Valley, the battles of Fredericksburg, Beverly Ford, and Gettysburg, the action at Falling Waters, and other engagements of less importance. He served with the cavalry corps, 1863-64, and at Washington and Fairfax Court-House, 1864-65. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 15th of June,

1869, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant March 1, 1872. He joined at Fort McPherson, Neb., on the 30th of September, 1869, where he served, with occasional tours of field service, until March, 1872. He had a successful combat (commanding) with hostile Sioux at Red Willow Creek, Neb., June 8, 1870, and was highly commended in general orders for conspicuous gallantry upon that occasion. When the first detachment of the regiment moved from Fort McPherson in November, 1871, to Arizona, he was continued on duty at that station in charge of public property until March, 1872, when he proceeded to Omaha as a witness before the United States court, and in June conducted a detachment of recruits, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in August. He participated in the Apache campaigns of 1872-74, and was engaged in the affair north of the Four Peaks, the action at the Caves in Salt River Cañon, the affairs on Pinto Creek, in the Music Mountains, in the Diamond River country and in the Cerbat Mountains. He was also employed in making a wagon road reconnaissance from Camp McDowell to Wickenberg in October, 1872; in superintending the removal of Jamaspae's band of Apache-Mojaves from the Colorado River to the Verde Reservation in June, 1873; as quartermaster and commissary at Camp Hualpai, preparatory to the abandonment of the station, July-August, 1873; in operating against hostile Apaches in the Santa Maria, Bradshaw, and New River Mountains, December, 1873; in operating against the Hualpais with Apache-Mojave scouts, February-April, 1874, until he compelled all the Indians belonging to that tribe to surrender at the La Paz Reservation; and as depot quartermaster at Fort Whipple from July, 1874, to June, 1875. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet captain, to date from December 28, 1872, for gallant conduct in the engagement with Tonto-Apache Indians at the Caves; and a brevet major, to date from April 4, 1874, for distinguished services in the campaign against the Hualpai Indians. He was appointed, March 22, 1875, an aide-de-camp for Brevet Major-General Kautz, commanding the Department of Arizona, and engineer officer on the department staff, and discharged the duties of these positions until March 6, 1878, when he was relieved from duty as an aide-de-camp by the retirement of Brevet Major-General Kautz from the command of the department, but continued to serve as engineer officer on the department staff until April 30, 1878. He was also employed during this period as a quartermaster from September 2, 1875, to April 16, 1876, in connection with the construction of military roads in Arizona, and his operations included the reconnaissance and construction of wagon roads from Prescott to Skull Valley and from Prescott to Camps Verde and McDowell. The department commander mentions his excellent management in the annual report for 1875-76, and says "that the aid furnished through the military service has had the effect to secure the greatest possible amount of work that could be obtained out of the money appropriated, probably nearly doubling the result that would have been obtained had the work been let to contractors." He also made new surveys of Camps Grant (including the timber lands of Mount Graham), Verde, Thomas, Apache, and McDowell. After nearly six years of important and conspicuous service in Arizona he availed himself of a leave of absence until October, 1878, when he rejoined the regiment at Fort Washakie, Wyo., and commanded a company at that station until January, 1880, and was employed during May and June, 1879, in constructing a wagon road from Fort Washakie to Rawlins, Wyo., and on escort duty during August and September, 1879, with a United States surveying party in the Yellowstone Park. He was then assigned to the important position of quartermaster at Rawlins, Wyo., where he was charged with the duty of forwarding supplies to the troops on Snake and White Rivers until June, 1880, when he was appointed property quartermaster at the headquarters of the Department of the Platte, and is now serving at Omaha, Neb., in the discharge of the duties of that position.

Rockwell, Charles H. Born in Ohio. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 15th of June, 1869, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant August 29, 1872. He served at the Academy as an assistant instructor of artillery until the 28th of August, when he availed himself of the graduating leave of absence and joined at Fort McPherson, Neb., on the 30th of November, where he had station, with occasional tours of field service, until November, 1871, when he accompanied the first detachment of the regiment (commissary and quartermaster), by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp Grant in January, 1872, where he served as a company commander, commissary, and quartermaster until October, when he was appointed regimental quartermaster, to date from August 29, 1872, and held the position until October 5, 1876. He joined the headquarters at Camp McDowell on the 14th of December, but, a few days later, joined the troops in the field and participated in the Apache campaign of 1873, and was engaged in the affair on Pinto Creek. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet captain, to date from April 9, 1873, for gallant conduct in the closing campaign against the Tonto-Apache Indians. He was a member of a board of officers which was convened at Los Angeles and San Francisco for the purchase of cavalry horses, April-July, 1873, and then availed himself of a leave of absence until January, 1874, when he conducted a detachment from Benicia Barracks to Arizona, and rejoined the regimental headquarters at Camp Lowell in March, where he served as commissary and quartermaster until May, 1875. He then marched with the headquarters, by the way of Fort Bayard, Santa Fé, and Fort Union, to Fort Lyon, and proceeded thence to Fort Hays, Kan., where he arrived on the 29th of June, and served as quartermaster, with occasional details as commissary and adjutant (acting regimental adjutant, November 15, 1875-March 20, 1876), until April, 1876, when he was appointed a member of a board of officers which was convened for the purchase of cavalry horses, and continued on that duty until July. He then proceeded to Fort Laramie, Wyo., for the purpose of participating in the Sioux campaign in Northern Wyoming, Dakota, and Montana; but, being unable to overtake the regiment, was assigned, in August, to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he was employed in arming and equipping recruits for the cavalry regiments in the field until November, when he was appointed chief commissary of the Powder River expedition, and served in that position until February, 1877. He then had station at Fort D. A. Russell until May, when he entered upon a tour of field service in Northern Wyoming which continued until October. He was engaged in the operations against the hostile Nez Percés, and commanded the escort on duty with the lieutenant-general of the army from Fort Washakie, Wyo., by the way of the Big Horn Mountains, to Fort Custer, Mont. He then served at Fort McPherson until January, 1878, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until the 29th of June. He rejoined at Fort McPherson and commanded a company until September 20, 1878, when he was selected for recruiting service and had stations at St. Louis and Boston until October, 1880, when he was transferred to Cincinnati and thence to Jefferson Barracks, where he had station until January, 1882, when he rejoined at Fort Sidney, Neb., where he has since served, with occasional tours of detached service, being employed at times as a company commander, post adjutant, quartermaster, commissary, and as acting regimental adjutant.

Greely, Adolphus W. Born at Newburyport, Mass. He served during the war of the Rebellion as a private, corporal, and first sergeant in the Nineteenth Massachusetts Volunteers from July 26, 1861, to March 18, 1863, when he was appointed a second lieutenant in the Eighty-first United States Colored Troops. He was promoted, in that regiment, a first lieutenant April 26, 1864, and a captain April 4, 1865. He participated in the action at Ball's Bluff, the siege of Yorktown, the action at West Point, the battle of Fair Oaks, the affair before Richmond known as Heintzelman's skirmish, the action at Peach Orchard, the skirmish at Savage Station, the battles of White Oak Swamp (wounded) and Malvern Hill, the affair near Fairfax Court-House, the battle of Antietam (twice wounded, and in hospital until November 10, 1862); with the forlorn hope that crossed the Rappahannock December 11, 1862, and in the battle of Fredericksburg. He was then transferred to the West and participated in the siege of Port Hudson. His regiment was mustered out of service November 1, 1866, but he was retained until March 22, 1867, when he was honorably discharged and made a brevet major of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865, for faithful and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion. He was appointed, from Louisiana, a second lieutenant in the Thirtysixth (present Seventh) Infantry March 7, 1867, and was employed for some time on recruiting service for the Thirty-ninth Infantry and Ninth Cavalry. He was transferred, upon the reduction of the army, to the Second Artillery, to date from July 14, 1869, but the order was subsequently revoked and he was assigned, August 7, 1869, to the Fifth Cavalry with the same date, and was promoted a first lieutenant May 27, 1873. He was serving as acting chief signal officer of the Department of the Platte when he was transferred to the regiment, and continued on that duty until March, 1871, when he joined his company at Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he served as a company commander, commissary, and quartermaster until July, when he was assigned to duty in the office of the chief signal officer of the army, where he served until June, 1881, and was employed as a station inspector, as superintendent of the construction of military telegraph lines in Texas, and as a general assistant in the Washington office. He was assigned to the command of the Arctic expedition of 1880, but the order was subsequently revoked because of an unfavorable report made by a board of naval officers upon the vessel which had been selected for the service. The Lady Franklin Bay expedition was then organized during the spring and summer of 1881, and in July he sailed from St. John's, N. F., in command, with the intention of remaining absent for two years. The object of the expedition is to establish a supply and meteorological station at Lady Franklin Bay and make explorations northward from that place. Lieutenant Greely was for six years a student of Arctic explorations, and his experiences of twelve years in the signal service of the army, particularly in compiling observations and forecasting the daily weather reports, have been such as to qualify him for the scientific part of the work, and it is hoped that the result of his researches will add valuable information to the subject of Arctic explorations.

Barnard, Phineas P. Born in New York. He served during the war of the Rebellion as an assistant quartermaster of volunteers, with the rank of captain, from May 13, 1863, to December 6, 1865, and was made a brevet major of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865, for faithful and meritorious services. He was appointed, from Michigan, a 2d lieut. in the Fourth Infantry, to date from March 7, 1867, and was made, to date from the same day, a brevet first lieutenant and a brevet captain for faithful and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion. He served at Fort Laramie, Wyo., until March 23, 1869, when he was placed on the list of unassigned officers, where he remained until July 14, 1869, when he was transferred to the Fifth Cavalry. He was promoted a first lieutenant June 4, 1875. He joined at Fort McPherson, Neb., in September, 1869, where he had station, with occasional tours of field service, until November, 1871, when he accompanied the first detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in January, 1872, where he served as commissary and quartermaster until June, and thereafter as receiving and shipping quartermaster at Ehrenberg, on the Colorado River, until May, 1875, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until September. He then joined at Fort Hays, Kan., and served at that station, Fort Robinson, and Fort McPherson, Neb., and Fort McKinney, Wyo., until October, 1879, and was chiefly employed as commissary and quartermaster, and commanding a company during the summer of 1878. He was ordered before a Retiring Board in December, 1879, and having been found incapacitated for active service, was granted a sick-leave of absence until further orders.

Hall, William P. Born in Missouri. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 15th of June, 1868, and assigned to the Nineteenth Infantry as a second lieutenant. He served with his regiment at Batesville, Ark., until March 31, 1869, when he was placed on the list of unassigned officers, where he remained until July 14, 1869, when he was transferred to the Fifth Cavalry, and was promoted a first lieutenant July 1, 1876. He joined at Fort McPherson, Neb., August 22, 1869, and served with the Republican River expedition until November, and was engaged in the affair on Prairie Dog Creek. He then had stations at Fort McPherson, Plum Creek, and North Platte, with occasional tours of field service, until November, 1871, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until February, 1872. He then rejoined at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and a few weeks later accompanied a detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp Crittenden in June, where he commanded a company and the post until January, 1873, and was charged with the difficult duty of protecting the settlers in the Senoita Valley against the incursions of predatory Apaches who infested the border. During this period he had three affairs (in the valley) and one combat (Whetstone Mountains) with the enemy, and conducted his operations with so much energy and judgment as to win the congratulations of the department commander. He participated in the Apache campaign of 1873; served as commissary (relieved July, 1874) and quartermaster at Camp Grant from October, 1873, to September, 1874, when he availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until September, 1875. He was then assigned to temporary duty at St. Louis Barracks, where he served until December, when he rejoined at Fort Dodge, Kan., where he had station (post adjutant) until June, 1876, when he was appointed acting regimental quartermaster, and participated in the Sioux campaign in Northern Wyoming, and in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition of 1876, and was engaged in the affair at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., and in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak. He was appointed regimental quartermaster October 5, 1876, and had station at Fort D. A. Russell until April, 1880. He was also employed as quartermaster for the Wind River expedition of 1877, for the field operations of the regiment in Northern Wyoming during the summer of 1878, and as chief quartermaster for the expedition against the hostile Utes of Colorado during the fall of 1879, and participated in raising the siege and action of Milk Creek, Col., and in the affair (commanding) at Rifle Creek, Col., Oct 20, 1879, where he repelled the attacks of a superior force of the enemy and successfully extricated his small command from a perilous position. He changed station in April, 1880, to Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he served as post and regimental quartermaster until August, 1882, when he was transferred with the regimental headquarters to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he is now serving as post and regimental quartermaster and commissary of subsistence.

Schuyler, Walter S. Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 15th of June, 1870, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant July 29, 1876. He joined at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., on the 9th of October, where he served (on escort duty with a surveying party during the summer of 1871) until December, 1871, when he accompanied the second detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in February, 1872, where he had station, with occasional tours of detached duty, until June. He then entered upon a tour of field service, which continued, with few interruptions, until February, 1875. He participated in all the Apache campaigns of that period, and was engaged in the brilliant action at Muchos Cañons; the affairs on the Santa Maria, Sycamore Creek, and in the Red Rock country; the actions (commanding) on Pinto Creek, on Lost River, on the Black Mesa, on the east branch of the Verde River, on Cave Creek, on Cañon Creek, in the Superstition and Arivapa Mountains; near the Gila River, in the Mazatzal Mountains; on the west side of the Four Peaks; in the Four Peaks, and near the north peak of the Mazatzal Mountains. He superintended the removal of the Apache-

Yuma Indians from Camp Date Creek to the Verde reservation in May, 1873, and was in charge of the agency for several months. He was among the most active, untiring, and successful of the young officers who participated in the Apache campaigns of 1872-75, and was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet first lieutenant, to date from September 25, 1872, for gallant conduct in the engagement at Muchos Cañons; a brevet captain, to date from June 26, 1873, for gallant conduct in the engagement on Lost River; a brevet major, to date from April 28, 1874, for gallantry in the action at Salt River; and a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from May 14, 1874, for gallant conduct in the engagement in the Red Rock country. He availed himself in April, 1875, of a leave of absence and visited Europe, and upon his return to the United States rejoined at Fort Hays, Kan., in March, 1876, and served as acting regimental adjutant until the 1st of June, when he was appointed an aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General George Crook, and immediately proceeded to Fort Fetterman, whence he made a daring march, with a few men, across the country, which was infested with hostile Sioux, to Goose Creek, Wyo., where he joined the general and participated in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak. He participated in the Powder River expedition during the winter of 1876-77, and was engaged in the brilliant action at Bates Creek (north branch of Powder River), where he was distinguished for good judgment and conspicuous gallantry. He served with the expedition against the hostile Utes of Colorado during the march from Rawlins, Wyo., in October, 1879, to the relief of the besieged troops on Milk Creek, Col., and participated in raising the siege and action at that place on the 5th. He was on a leave of absence from January, 1880, to January, 1882, when he was relieved, at his own request, from duty as an aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General George Crook, and joined his company at Fort Sidney, Neb., where he is now serving.

Michler, Frank. Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 15th of June, 1870, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant November 12, 1876. He joined at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., on the 9th of October, where he had station (serving at Chug Water, August-September, 1871) until December, 1871, when he accompanied the second detachment of the regiment by the way of San Francisco en route to Arizona. He was detached at San Diego and marched overland, in charge of men and horses, to Fort Yuma, where he rejoined his company and arrived at Camp Hualpai in February, 1872. He was engaged in a skirmish in the Big Cañon of Bill Williams' Fork on the 5th of July, 1872. He participated in the Apache campaigns of 1872-73, and was engaged in the brilliant action at Muchos Cañons, the affairs on the Santa Maria and Sycamore Creek, the actions (commanding) on Oak Creek, Sycamore Creek, in the Red Rocks, on Clear Creek, on Tonto Creek, and in the Mazatzal Mountains. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet first lieutenant, to date from September 25, 1872, for gallant conduct in the engagement at Muchos Cañons; and a brevet captain, to date from January 22, 1873, for gallant conduct in an engagement at the head of Tonto Creek. He served at Camp Hualpai from the 10th of April to the 5th of July, 1873, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until January 10, 1874, when he was appointed an aide-de-camp for Major-General Schofield, and served at San Francisco and West Point until July 1, 1878, and thereafter as adjutant of the Military Academy until February 28, 1881. He was then relieved and granted a leave of absence until October, when he joined his company at Fort Niobrara, Neb. He was employed during April, May, and June, 1882, in making a survey of a part of southwest Dakota, with a view to laying out a wagon road across the Sioux reservation, in accordance with treaty stipulations, the road beginning at Fort Niobrara, Neb. He changed station, in August, 1882, to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and thence, in November, to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he is now serving.

Davis, George B. Born in Massachusetts. He served during the war of the Rebellion as a sergeant, quartermaster-sergeant, and second lieutenant in the First Massachusetts Cavalry from September 10, 1863, to July 16, 1865, when he was discharged, to date from June 26, 1865. He participated in the Richmond and Petersburg campaigns of 1864-65, and was engaged in the battles of the Wilderness and Todd's Tavern; in General Sheridan's cavalry raid (May, 1864); the actions at Beaver Dam, Yellow Tavern, and Meadow Bridge; the battle of Hawes' Shop; the actions on the Jerusalem Plank Road; the siege of Petersburg, including the actions (three) on the Weldon Railway, Strawberry Plains, Deep Bottom, Ream's Station, and Hatcher's Run. He served at the headquarters of the armies operating against Richmond, March-May, 1865, and at the headquarters of the Army of the Potomac, May-June, 1865. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 12th of June, 1871, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant May 9, 1877. He joined at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., on the 29th of September, where he had a station until December, when he accompanied the second detachment of the regiment, by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California, to Arizona, and arrived at Camp Bowie in February, 1872, where he served as commissary and quartermaster until the 19th of August. He was then assigned to field service at Calabasas, where he remained until November, when he returned to Camp Bowie and served with occasional tours of field service, until August 9, 1873, when he was assigned to duty at the Military Academy as assistant professor of Spanish from August 30, 1873, to August 28, 1875; as assistant professor of French from the 12th of January to the 21st of September, 1876; as assistant professor of chemistry, mineralogy, and geology from January 16, 1877, to January 12, 1878; and as principal assistant professor of Spanish from August 28, 1875, to August 28, 1878. He rejoined the regiment in the Department of the Platte in September, 1878, and participated (commanding company), during October, in the pursuit of hostile Cheyennes northward from Sidney into the sand-hills of Northwestern Nebraska. He then marched to Fort Washakie, Wyo., where he had station as a company commander until December, when he was transferred to Fort D. A. Russell, where he served as a company commander, commissary, quartermaster, and ordnance officer until April, 1880, when he was transferred to Fort Niobrara, in Northern Nebraska, where he has since served, with occasional tours of detached service and leaves of absence, as a company commander, commissary, and quartermaster.

Parkhurst, Charles D. Born at Roxbury, Mass. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 14th of June, 1872, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant August 23, 1878; he availed himself of the graduating leave until the 23d of September, when he was assigned to duty at Benicia Barracks (conducting recruits to Nevada) and San Francisco until the 19th of October, when he sailed, on the steamship Newbern as commissary and quartermaster for a detachment of recruits by the way of the Gulf of California and the Colorado River to Arizona, and joined his company at Camp Date Creek on the 29th of November; he participated in the Apache campaign of 1872-73, and was engaged in the affairs on the north fork of Baby Cañon (commanding), in repulsing a night attack at the forks of Baby Cañon, at Indian Run, and on the east branch of the Verde River; he served as adjutant at Camp Date Creek, March-May, 1873, and as adjutant, company commander, signal officer, commissary, and quartermaster at Camp McDowell (commanding post July-September, 1874) until May, 1875, having occasional tours of field service; he participated in the Apache campaign of 1874, and was engaged in three affairs in the Arivapa and Mazatzal Mountains during April and May, 1874; he was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet first lieutenant, to date from January 1, 1873, for gallant conduct in the Tonto Basin; he was on a leave of absence from the 14th of May to the 14th of October, 1875, when he rejoined at Fort Hays, Kan., where he had station, with occasional tours of field service, until July 17, 1876; he then proceeded by rail to Cheyenne, and marched thence to Goose Creek, Wyo., where he joined the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the skirmish at Slim Buttes, Dak.; upon the disbandment of the expedition at Fort Robinson, Neb., in October, he was assigned to Fort McPherson, Neb., where he had station until August, 1877, and was employed in Omaha during the railway riots of July, 1877; he then participated in the operations of the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés during September and October, 1877, and upon the disbandment of the expedition was assigned to Fort McKinney, Wyo., where he had station, with occasional tours of field service, until September, 1878; he then availed himself of a leave of absence until July, 1879, when he rejoined at Fort McPherson and commanded a company at that station and during the operations of the expedition against the hostile Utes of Colorado until October, and thereafter served on company duty until January, 1880, when he was appointed quartermaster of the Ute expedition, and discharged the duties of the position until May, 1880, when he rejoined his company at Fort Robinson, where he served chiefly as quartermaster until March, 1882; he then changed station to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he served as a company commander and quartermaster until August, when he was transferred to Fort McKinney, where he is now serving as a company commander.

Watts, Charles H. Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 14th of June, 1872, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant April 2, 1879; he availed himself of the graduating leave until the 26th of September, when he was assigned to duty at Benicia Barracks until the 19th of October, when he sailed on the steamship Newbern with a detachment of recruits, by the way of the Gulf of California and the Colorado River to Arizona, and joined the regiment at Camp Lowell on the 30th of November, and conducted a detachment of recruits to Camp McDowell, and proceeded thence to Camp Grant, where he arrived on the 27th of December, and was employed as quartermaster until February 1, 1873, when he joined his company in the field and participated in the Apache campaign of that year; he was present at the outbreak at the San Carlos Agency which resulted in the death of Lieutenant Almy, and was engaged in the affairs in the Santa Teresa Mountains and near the San Carlos Agency; he commanded a company at San Carlos Agency and Camp Grant, with few interruptions, from May, 1873, to January, 1875, and was employed in garrison duties, with occasional tours of field service; he was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet first lieutenant, to date from April 9, 1873, for gallant conduct in the closing campaign against the Tonto-Apache Indians; he marched, in May, 1875, with the first detachment of the regiment, by the way of the Rio Grande, Santa Fé, and Fort Union, to Fort Lyon, Col., where he arrived on the 25th of June, and had station until October; he then availed himself of a leave of absence until January, 1876, when he rejoined at Fort Lyon, where he served until the 5th of June; he then proceeded by rail to Cheyenne, and marched thence to the Black Hills of Wyoming and participated in the operations against the hostile Sioux until the 7th of July, when he was wounded by the accidental discharge of a pistol and disabled for duty until December, when he rejoined at Fort McPherson, Neb., where he had station until November, 1877; he was employed at Chicago (commanding company) during the railway riots of July, 1877, and participated in the operations of the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés (commanding company) during September and October, 1877; upon the disbandment of the expedition he was assigned to Fort McKinney, Wyo., where he served until May, 1878, when he entered upon a tour of field service with a battalion of the regiment, which continued until December; he was then assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he had station until September, 1879, when he availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until April, 1880; he then rejoined at Fort D. A. Russell, and soon thereafter was transferred to Camp Sheridan, Neb., where he served as a post and company commander until May, 1881, when he changed station to Fort Robinson, Neb., where he is now serving.

London, Robert. Born in North Carolina. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 13th of June, 1873, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant May 1, 1879. He reported at Camp Lowell, A. T., on the 18th of November, and joined his company at Camp Grant on the 12th of December. He participated in the Apache campaign of 1874, and was engaged in the combat near old Camp Pinal; the affairs (six) in the Pinal and Santa Teresa Mountains, north of San Carlos Agency and on the south side of Salt River, southeast of the Big Cañon (where the murderer of Lieutenant Almy was killed). He was commended in the official report for valuable services during these operations, and was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet first lieutenant, to date from April 3, 1874, for gallant and distinguished services in the campaign against the San Carlos Apache Indians. He served as commissary at San Carlos Agency May–November, 1874, and at Camp Apache with tours of field service until June, 1875, when he returned to San Carlos in command of a company; but orders having arrived for the transfer of the regiment to the Department of the Missouri, he returned to Camp Apache in July, and marched by the way of Fort Wingate, Santa Fé, and Fort Union to Fort Lyon, Col., and proceeded thence to Fort Gibson, I. T., where he arrived in September and served as adjutant and commissary until December. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until February, 1876, when he was assigned to duty at St. Louis Barracks, where he served until June, when he rejoined his company and participated in the campaign against the hostile Sioux in the Black Hills of Wyoming and in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the affairs on the south branch of Cheyenne River and at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., and in the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak. Upon the disbandment of the expedition at Fort Robinson, Neb., in October, he was assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he had station until June, 1879, and was employed during the summer of 1877 as quartermaster for a battalion of the Fifth Cavalry operating in Northern Wyoming and in field operations in Idaho Territory during the summer of 1878. He commanded a company, with few interruptions, from December, 1878, to December, 1880; served at Fort McKinney, Wyo., from July to October, 1879, and marched thence to Rawlins, Wyo., where he served with the reserve of the Ute expedition until November. He was then assigned to Fort D. A. Russell, where he had station until April, 1880, when he was transferred to Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he is now serving.

Eaton, George O. Born in Maine. He enlisted in the Fifteenth Maine (veteran) Volunteers, at Belfast, on the 1st of February, 1865, and served in the Shenandoah Valley until the assassination of President Lincoln, when his regiment was dispatched to Washington and employed on guard duty during the trial of the conspirators. His regiment was transferred to Savannah, Ga., after the Grand Review, as part of an army intended to operate against the French troops in Mexico, and remained there for some time, when it was ordered to Georgetown, S. C., and he was honorably discharged at Hilton Head on the 11th of August, 1865. Four years later he accepted an appointment to the Military Academy, where he was graduated on the 13th of June, 1873, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant May 1, 1879. He was assigned to duty with a detachment of recruits at Benicia Barracks, Cal., and sailed, by the way of the Gulf of California and the Colorado River, to Fort Yuma, and marched thence to Camp Verde, where he arrived on the 19th of December, and served during his tour of duty in Arizona as a company commander, commissary, and quartermaster. He participated in the Apache campaign of 1874, and was engaged in the combat at Sunset Pass and in the affairs (two) at Snow Lake, near Jarvis Pass (commanding), and was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet first lieutenant, to date from December 5, 1874, for gallant and distinguished conduct in a scout made by him through the country in the neighborhood of Jarvis Pass and Little Colorado River during November, 1874. He commanded a company of Indian scouts at the Verde Reservation, and later the escort which conducted the Verde Indians to San Carlos Agency, and rendered important service on the east branch of the Verde River, where the Indians engaged in a fight among themselves, which resulted in a loss of eighteen killed and fifty wounded before he could interpose his authority and restore order. He had only sixteen men, and the occasion demanded the exercise of rare judgment and superb courage. His report of the affair was submitted just as the change of department commanders was made, and but for this his services upon that trying occasion would have received a conspicuous mention. He marched, in May, 1875, from Camp Verde, by the way of Fort Wingate, Santa Fé, and Fort Union, to Fort Lyon, Col., and proceeded thence to Fort Hays, Kan., where he arrived on the 29th of June and had station, with occasional tours of field service, until May, 1876, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until July. He then rejoined his company and participated in the campaign against the hostile Sioux in the Black Hills of Wyoming, and was serving with the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition when he was wounded at Rose Bud Creek, Mon., on the 7th of August, by the accidental discharge of a pistol while he was attempting to check a night stampede of the horses belonging to his company. He served with the command to the mouth of Powder River, when he was detached for medical treatment, and rejoined at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., in September, where he had station until July, 1879 (sick-leave, April, 1877, to February, 1878; commissary and quartermaster April, 1878, to July, 1879), when he availed himself of a sick-leave of absence until October, 1880. He then rejoined at Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he served until July, 1881, when he was detached to Tongue River, Mon., for escort duty to the Yellowstone Park with the lieutenant-general of the army; and upon the completion of this duty in September he returned to Fort Laramie, where he served until the summer of 1882, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until March, 1883.

Bishop, Hoel S. Born in Wisconsin. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 13th of June, 1873, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant, and was promoted a first lieutenant June 1, 1879. He was assigned to duty with a detachment of recruits at Benicia Barracks, Cal., and sailed, by the way of the Gulf of California and the Colorado River, to Fort Yuma, and marched thence to Fort Whipple, where he arrived on the 14th of December and had station during his tour of service in Arizona. He participated in the Apache campaign of 1874, and was engaged in the affairs in the Diamond River country and at Mears' Wells in the Cerbat Mountains, and was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet first lieutenant, to date from April 4, 1874, for distinguished services in the campaign against the Hualpai Indians. He marched, in July, 1875, from Fort Whipple, by the way of Fort Wingate, Santa Fé, Forts Union, Lyon, and Dodge, to Camp Supply, I. T., where he arrived in September, and had station, with occasional tours of field service, until June, 1876, and was highly commended by the department commander for promptness, energy, and efficiency in a successful pursuit and chastisement of a party of Osage Indians near the Cimarron River on the 22d of January, 1876. He participated in the campaign against the Sioux in the Black Hills of Wyoming and in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition of 1876, and was engaged in the affair at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., and in the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak. Upon the disbandment of the expedition at Fort Robinson, Neb., in October, he was assigned to Fort McPherson, Neb., where he had station until August, 1877, when he was transferred to Fort Washakie, Wyo., and participated (commanding Indian scouts) in the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés. He then served as adjutant, commissary, and quartermaster at Fort Washakie from October, 1877, to July, 1879. He captured, after a vigorous pursuit, a band of Bannack Indians on Buffalo Fork of Snake River, twenty miles south of the Yellowstone Park, on the 16th of September, 1878. He was then transferred to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he served until October, 1879, when he participated in the movement against the Utes of Colorado, and was engaged in raising the siege and action at Mill Creek, Col., on the 5th of October. He served as chief commissary of the Ute expedition until December, 1879, and thereafter commanded the battalion of the regiment on White River, Col., until March, 1880, when he returned to Fort D. A. Russell, where he had station until April. He was then transferred to Fort Laramie, Wyo., and was selected in October for recruiting service, and served at Jefferson Barracks until October, 1882, when he rejoined his company at Fort Laramie, where he is now serving.

Second Lieutenants.

Andrus, Edwin P. Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 16th of June, 1875, and assigned to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 12th of June, 1879, and assigned, on the 13th, to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant. He joined his company at the White River Agency, Col., on the 27th of October, where he served until March, 1880. He has since served, with occasional tours of detached service and leaves of absence, as a company officer at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., Fort Robinson, Neb. (commanding company), Fort Sidney, Neb., and Fort Laramie, Wyo.

Waite, Henry De H. Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 12th of June, 1879, and assigned, on the 13th, to the Third Infantry as a second lieutenant. He was transferred, at his own request, to the Fifth Cavalry, to rank from September 4, 1879, and joined his company at Fort Washakie, Wyo., on the 1st of October, where he served (adjutant) until May, 1880, when he was assigned to Fort Laramie, Wyo., where he had station until May, 1882, when he was transferred to Fort Washakie, where he is now serving as a company officer.

Almy, William E. (a son of Rear-Admiral John J. Almy, United States Navy). Born in the District of Columbia. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 12th of June, 1879, and assigned, on the 13th, to the Third Infantry as a second lieutenant. He was transferred, at his own request, to the Fifth Cavalry, to rank from September 4, 1879, and joined at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., on the 29th of September, and participated (as cavalry adjutant) in the expedition against the hostile Utes of Colorado (October–November, 1879), and was engaged in raising the siege and action at Milk Creek, Col., and served at the White River Agency, Col., until the 22d of November. He returned to Fort D. A. Russell on the 29th, where he served (commanding company) until April 27, 1880, when he was transferred to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he has since served, with occasional tours of detached service and leave of absence, as company commander, post adjutant, and acting signal and ordnance officer.

Cornish, Lester W. Born in Massachusetts. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 10th of June, 1881, and assigned, on the 11th, to the Fifth Cavalry as a second lieutenant. Russell, Wyo., where he had station until November 12, 1882, when he was transferred to Fort Sidney, Neb., where he is now serving as a company officer.

SIXTH REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

Colonel.

Carr, Eugene A. Born in Erie County, N. Y. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1850, and assigned to the Mounted Rifles (now Third Cavalry) as a brevet second lieutenant, and was promoted, in that regiment, a second lieutenant June 30, 1851. He served at Carlisle until June, 1851, when he joined his company at Jefferson Barracks, and served at that station until June, 1852, when he was ordered to Fort Leavenworth for frontier service. He participated in two expeditions to the Rocky Mountains during 1852–53; served as adjutant, quartermaster, and commissary for Major Sanderson's command from June to October, 1852, and as adjutant, quartermaster, and commissary for Captain Van Buren's command from July to October, 1853. He served during the winter of 1852–53 at Fort Scott, Mo., and in the fall of 1853 was transferred from Fort Leavenworth to Fort Gibson, in the Cherokee Nation, and thence to Texas, where he was actively employed in field service, and was severely wounded in a combat with the Mescalero Apaches near Mount Diavolo on the 10th of October, 1854. He was promoted, for gallantry in this affair, a first lieutenant in the First (present Fourth) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855. He then participated in the Sioux expedition of 1855; served at Fort Leavenworth and in field service in Kansas in 1856; was employed in quelling the Kansas border disturbances and served as an aide-de-camp for Governor Robert J. Walker from the 1st of May to the 22d of December, 1857, when he was ordered to special duty at Washington, where he remained during the winter. He was promoted a captain, in his regiment, June 11, 1858, and participated in the Utah expedition of that year. He was then ordered to Fort Washita, where he had station until April, 1861, and served with the expedition to the Antelope Hills in 1859, with the Kiowa and Comanche expedition of 1860, and was engaged in several skirmishes with the hostile Indians. Captain Carr marched in May, 1861, under the command of Major Emory, from Fort Washita to Fort Leavenworth, and at once entered upon active service in General Lyon's campaign in Southwestern Missouri. He participated in the action at Dug Springs and in the battle of Wilson's Creek, where he commanded his company and won the brevet of lieutenant-colonel, to date from August 10, 1861, for gallant and meritorious services. He was commissioned, in September, 1861, colonel of the Third Illinois Cavalry, to date from August 15, 1861, and was an acting brigadier-general in General Fremont's Hundred Days' campaign, and later served under Generals Hunter, Halleck, and Curtis. He commanded during January, 1862, about twenty-five hundred cavalry which, moving from Rolla towards Springfield, were employed as a force of observation. He was assigned in February to the command of the Fourth Division of the Army of the Southwest; participated in the pursuit of the enemy into Arkansas; was engaged in the battle of Pea Ridge, where he was conspicuous for daring and coolness in locating and directing the deployment of his division on the extreme right during the battle of the second day, and where, although thrice wounded, he held his position for seven hours, and by superb fighting contributed in a great measure to the brilliant success of the National army. The casualties in his command exceeded seven hundred, more than half the entire loss in the two days' battle. He was appointed a brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from March 7, 1862, in the recognition of distinguished services on that occasion. He afterwards participated in the operations against Little Rock, the march to Helena during the summer of 1862, and was promoted, in November, 1862, a major in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from July 17, 1862. General Carr commanded the Army of the Southwest during the fall of 1862, and was preparing for an active campaign when failing health compelled him to retire from the field; he was afterwards assigned to the command of the St. Louis District of Missouri, where he served during the winter of 1862-63. He commanded the Fourteenth Division of the Thirteenth Army Corps during the Vicksburg campaign of 1863, and was engaged in the battles of Magnolia Church and Port Gibson (leading), the capture of Jackson, the action at Edwards' Station (commanding), the battle of Champion Hill, the capture of the enemy's works at Big Black River Bridge, the assaults upon Vicksburg, 18th (leading) and 22d of May, and the siege and capture of Vicksburg, 23d of May-4th of July. He was conspicuous for courage and ability in the battles of this memorable campaign, and won the highest commendation from his corps commander. The corps in which General Carr was a gallant leader opened and led the way to the fields of Magnolia Church, Port Gibson, and Champion Hills, where he was remarkable for the vigor of his operations, capturing at Edwards' Station a railway train of commissary and ordnance stores. The corps fought and won the battle of Big Black River, where General Carr's division had the extreme advance of the National column, and began and ended the engagement; his division also made the first lodgment in the enemy's works at Vicksburg on the 22d of May, where he was conspicuous for coolness under fire and for holding his command so steady that not a regiment faltered on that occasion. He was recommended for promotion as a reward for his skill, valor, and distinguished services during this campaign, which resulted in the defeat of the enemy in five battles, the occupation of Jackson, and the capture of Vicksburg; he was made a brevet colonel, to date from May 17, 1863, for gallant and meritorious services at Big Black River Bridge. General Carr commanded the left wing of the Sixteenth Army Corps at Corinth during the fall of 1863, and in December was transferred to Little Rock, where he commanded the Second Division of the Army of Arkansas until January, 1864. He was afterwards assigned to the command of a cavalry division in the Department of Arkansas, which he retained until May, 1864; participating in the expedition against Camden; was engaged in the actions at the crossing of the Little Red River, at Poison Spring (commanding), at Prairie D'Ane, and the crossing of the Saline River at Jenkins' Ferry. He was then assigned to the command of the District of Little Rock, where he served until January, 1865, and was engaged with the enemy at Clarendon on the 20th of June. He commanded the Third Division of the Sixteenth Army Corps during the operations against Mobile in the spring of 1865, and was distinguished for gallantry at the siege of Spanish Fort, the capture of which compelled the evacuation of Mobile. He also participated in the assault on Fort Blakely, and was made a brevet major-general of volunteers, to date from March 11, 1865, for valuable services during the campaign. He served on the march to Montgomery, Ala., and commanded the St. Francis River District until January 15, 1866, when he was mustered out of volunteer service and was subsequently made a brevet brigadier-general, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services at the capture of Little Rock, Ark.; and a brevet major-general, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services in the field during the war of the Rebellion. Upon the expiration of a brief leave of absence he proceeded to North Carolina, and was assigned, in March, 1866, to the command of a detachment of the regiment and the post of Raleigh. He continued on this duty until April, 1867, when he was placed on waiting orders. He was assigned, in September, to duty at the headquarters of the Department of Washington, where he served as acting judge-advocate until April, 1868, and thereafter, and until about the end of Sept. as acting assistant inspector-general and discharge officer. He was then ordered to St. Louis for duty with a battalion of the Fifth Cavalry, the companies of which were moving from stations in the Southern States to Kansas for the purpose of participating in a campaign against the hostile Sioux and Cheyennes. He joined in the field on the 23d of October, and served with the battalion until the 30th of July, 1869. During this period he commanded an expedition on the western frontier of Kansas in the fall of 1868, and was engaged in the combats of the 18th, 25th, and 26th of October on Beaver and Shuter Creeks and on the north branch of Solomon River. He commanded an expedition to the Canadian River during the winter of 1868-69; and when marching across the country, in May, 1869, from Sheridan, Kan., to Fort McPherson, Neb., fought and defeated a large force of Cheyennes on Beaver Creek, Kan. He vigorously pursued the enemy for three days, and again inflicted a severe loss upon them at Spring Creek, Neb. He commanded the expedition to the Republican River during June and July, 1869, and by a series of brilliant operations against the savages opened that country to settlement. He commanded in the affair at Rock Creek, Col., and in the brilliant action at Summit Springs, Col., on the 11th of July, where he signally defeated the band of Dog Soldiers under the celebrated Cheyenne chief Tall Bull, thus securing a lasting peace to the long-distracted frontiers of Kansas, Nebraska, and Colorado. His conspicuous services during these operations were esteemed of so much value and importance to the country that he received the congratulations of the department commander Brigadier-General Augur, of Lieutenant-General Sheridan, and of General Sherman, and the thanks, by joint resolutions, of the Legislatures of Nebraska and Colorado. He was stationed at Fort McPherson, Neb., from the fall of 1869 to the 27th of November, 1871, when he succeeded to the command of the regiment and conducted the headquarters and six companies to the Department of Arizona. He arrived in January, 1872, at Camp McDowell, where the regiment was concentrated and distributed; had station there until February, 1873, and was employed part of the time on general court-martial duty at Prescott and San Francisco. He was promoted lieutenant-colonel of the Fourth Cavalry January 7, 1873, but, without joining that regiment, exchanged with Lieut.-Col. Hatch, to date from April 10, 1873. He changed station, with the headquarters of the regiment, to Camp Lowell in February, 1873, where he served in charge of the construction of that post, until April, 1874, when he was sent to San Diego and Los Angeles as president of a board of officers which was convened to purchase cavalry horses. Upon the completion of this duty he availed himself of a sick-leave of absence and visited Europe. He resumed the command of the regiment at Fort Hays, Kan., in June, 1875, and except a brief tour of field service in November, remained at that station until June, 1876. He was then transferred, with the headquarters and eight companies, to Cheyenne, Wyo., for the purpose of participating in the Sioux campaign of that year. He moved from Cheyenne to Fort Laramie and operated in the country north and east of that place, and commanded the District of the Black Hills until he was relieved by Colonel Merritt. He then served with the regiment as second in command until the organization of the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition at Goose Creek, Mon., on the 4th of August, when he again succeeded to the command, which he retained until the expedition was disbanded, on the 24th of October, at Fort Robinson, Neb. He commanded the regiment in the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak., on the 9th and 10th of September. He was then assigned, with four companies, to Fort McPherson, where he arrived on the 7th of November and had station until the summer of 1879. He was detached, in July, 1877, to Chicago, where he commanded a battalion of cavalry during the railway riots. While East, on a brief leave of absence, he was assigned to duty as a member of a Retiring Board convened in New York City, where he served until the fall of 1879, when, having been promoted colonel of the Sixth Cavalry, to date from April 29, 1879, he proceeded to Arizona and assumed the command of his regiment at Camp Lowell on the 1st of October, 1879, and was assigned to the command of field operations in Southeastern Arizona, where he was actively employed during the year 1880 against the hostile Apaches of Southeastern Arizona, Western New Mexico, and old Mexico. He has since had stations at Forts Apache and Lowell, and was conspicuously presented to the favorable attention of the country by a gallant and successful defense against the attempted massacre of his command by the White Mountain Apaches at Cibicu Creek in August, 1881, because of the arrest and subsequent killing of the medicine-man and prophet Nockaydetklinne, which paralyzed the hostile White Mountain Indians.

Majors.

Arnold, Abraham K. Born in Pennsylvania. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1859, and assigned to the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry as a brevet second lieutenant, and was appointed to the regiment a second lieutenant June 28, 1860. He served at Carlisle until October, 1860, when he conducted a detachment of recruits from New York by sea to Indianola, whence he marched by the way of San Antonio to Fort Inge, Texas, where he joined on the 2d of December, and was employed during the winter and spring of 1860-'61 as adjutant, commissary, and quartermaster, and in field operations against hostile Indians. He commanded his company during the last tour of field service which was performed in Texas by any part of the regiment, and pursued, in February, 1861, a party of Comanches who had organized a formidable raid upon the settlements between Camp Wood and Fort Inge. He conducted his operations with so much energy and intelligence that he soon forced them to retreat across the Rio Grande. He marched from Fort Inge for the sea-coast March 19, 1861, and upon arrival at Indianola embarked with the second detachment of the regiment on the steamship Empire City just in time to escape capture, and sailed for New York Harbor, and proceeded thence to Carlisle, where he arrived on the 27th of April. He was promoted a first lieutenant April 6, 1861, and was appointed adjutant of the regiment June 1, 1861. He participated in General Patterson's Shenandoah campaign, and was engaged in the action at Falling Waters and in the skirmishes near Martinsburg and Bunker Hill; served in the defenses of Washington during the winter of 1861-'62; participated in the Manassas and Virginia Peninsula campaigns, and was engaged in the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg, and in almost daily skirmishes with the enemy during the advance towards Richmond. He resigned his position as adjutant May 9, 1862, to accept the command of a company, and was engaged with the enemy at Hanover Court-House, where, with his squadron, he commanded the advance and opened the battle. He participated in the reconnaissance towards Ashland, and charged with his squadron through the town in conjunction with another squadron of the regiment, and dispersed the enemy, captured some prisoners, and destroyed a large quantity of supplies. He was severely wounded in the disastrous charge of the regiment at Gaines' Mill, which disabled him for any service until September, 1862, when he was appointed a mustering and disbursing officer, and served in New York and Boston until September, 1863. He was promoted a captain July 17, 1862, and commanded the regiment almost continuously from October 12, 1863, to July 24, 1864, and was engaged in the combat at Bristoe Station, the operations at Mine Run, in the raid to and action at Charlottesville, the action at Stannardsville, the skirmish near Morton's Ford, the battle of Todd's Tavern, the actions at Beaver Dam, Yellow Tavern and Meadow Bridge, the skirmish near Mechanicsville, the battles of Cold Harbor and Trevillian Station, and marched to the relief of General Wilson at Reams' Station when that officer made his raid on the South Side Railroad. He then availed himself of a leave of absence, and when en route to rejoin the regiment was assigned to the Military Academy as an assistant instructor of cavalry tactics, and held the position from August 23, 1864, to August 28, 1869, when, having been promoted a major in the Sixth Cavalry, to date from June 22, 1869, he was relieved and ordered to join his regiment. During his service at the Military Academy he prepared and published a valuable work entitled "Notes on Horses for Cavalry Service." He was made a brevet captain, to date from June 27, 1862, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Gaines' Mill, and a brevet major, to date from May 6, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Todd's Tavern. He proceeded to Texas, and, after serving at Fort Brown and Waco, joined the headquarters of his regiment at Fort Richardson on the 18th of June, 1870, and thereafter served in that State and Kansas, and was employed in the usual garrison and field duties until September, 1872, when he was appointed a disbursing officer in the Freedmen's Bureau and served at New Orleans, La., until November, 1878, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until the spring of 1879. He then rejoined his regiment, and was placed in command of the field operations in Southeastern Arizona against the hostile Apaches who were raiding in New Mexico. He served with an expedition into old Mexico in the neighborhood of Lake Guzmar and co-operated with the forces in New Mexico and with the Mexican troops, which resulted in destroying a large band of savages. When relieved from this command in October, 1879, he was thanked by the department commander for the efficient discharge of his many and difficult duties. He then served as a post commander until the winter of 1880-81, when he was appointed acting assistant inspector-general of the Department of Arizona, and continued in the discharge of the duties of that office until the summer of 1882, when he was relieved at his own request and served with his regiment until December, when he was again appointed an acting assistant inspector-general and assigned to the important duty of inspecting the military posts within the Department of Arizona.

'64, to Feb. 1865, in the Tennessee campaign against General Hood's rebel forces; he was promoted major-general of volunteers Jan. 27, 1865, and commanded a division in East Tennessee March-April, 1865, and subsequently commanded several districts until mustered out of the volunteer service Sept. 1, 1866; he was brevetted brigadier- and major-general U.S.A. March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services in the battles of Chickamauga, Ga., and of Nashville, Tenn., respectively; he was retired with rank of major-general June 9, 1868, for wounds received in line of duty (Acts August 3, '61, Secs. 16-17, July 28, '66, Sec. 32) and with rank of

Emory, William H. Born in Queen Anne County, Md. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1831, and assigned to the Fourth Artillery as a brevet second lieutenant; the next June he was appointed a brevet third lieutenant in the Mounted Rangers, and was subsequently transferred to the Fourth Artillery as a second lieutenant, to date from July 1, 1831. He served during the ensuing five years at Forts McHenry and Severn, Md.; at Charleston Harbor, S. C., during the period of the threatened nullification in that State; at Forts Hamilton and Lafayette, N. Y., and in the operations in the Creek Nation in 1836. He resigned his commission September 30, 1836, to accept, upon the invitation of the Secretary of War, an appointment as an assistant United States civil engineer, that he might become eligible for an appointment in the Topographical Corps. He acted in this capacity until July 7, 1838, when he was reappointed in the army with the rank of a first lieutenant in the corps of Topographical Engineers. He was employed on harbor improvements in the Delaware River, 1839-42; as an assistant in the Topographical Bureau at Washington, 1843-44, and as principal assistant on the Northeastern boundary survey between the United States and the British Provinces, 1844-46, and was conspicuous for untiring application to the duties of his office, and also for a proposal to continue the surveys during the winter months on the ridges of the mountains separating the waters flowing into the St. Lawrence from those flowing in the Atlantic. He received in this connection the high commendations of the British commissioner, who afterwards died in the Crimea, holding the rank of adjutant-general of the British army. He served during the Mexican war as chief engineer of the Army of the West, which was organized to conquer and hold New Mexico and California, and was acting assistant adjutant-general for Brigadier-General Kearney, who commanded that army. He subsequently served as lieutenant-colonel of a regiment of Maryland and District of Columbia Volunteers on the line of Vera Cruz and the city of Mexico. He made, while serving with the Army of the West, a reconnaissance of the route to California by the way of the Gila River, and his survey is yet the foundation for maps of that route. He participated during the month of December, 1846, in the battle of San Pasqual and the skirmish of San Bernardino. General Kearney assigned him, at San Pasqual, to the command of a squadron of dragoons for a perilous and important service, which he successfully accomplished, winning his spurs and laying the foundation for his subsequent transfer to the cavalry. He also participated, in January, 1847, in the passage of the San Gabriel River and the skirmish of the Mesa. These affairs were important and hotly contested, and, with the surprise of San Luis Obispo, constituted all the organized resistance to the American occupation of California. He was made a brevet captain, to date from December 6, 1846, for gallant and meritorious conduct at the battle of San Pasqual; and a brevet major, to date from January 9, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct at the battles of San Gabriel and the Mesa. He declined an appointment of major in the Third Dragoons, to date from April 9, 1847, because the regiment was only organized for and during the war with Mexico. He was on duty from 1848 to 1853 as chief astronomer for the running of the boundary line between California and Mexico, and served on that work through all its vicissitudes in California, when the commissioner who was appointed never joined the survey, but expended the appropriation traveling in Mexico, until Capt. Emory was appointed by the President, in 1854, both commissioner and astronomer, with full powers, under the Gadsden treaty of December 30, 1853. He completed the work in 1857 to the entire satisfaction of the government, and received the brevet of lieutenant-colonel, to date from October 19, 1857, for valuable and distinguished services as commissioner for establishing the boundary line between the United States and the Republic of Mexico. While employed upon this work he was promoted a captain in his corps, to date from April 24, 1851, and was appointed a major in the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855; but, without joining the regiment, was transferred, May 26, 1855, in that grade, to the Fourth (old First) Cavalry. During his long service in the Topographical —now the Engineer—Corps he was very active and deservedly conspicuous for his surveys and in compiling and reducing to form such maps as existed of the country west of the Mississippi River. He aided and matured the plans for the survey of the railway routes to the Pacific, and surveyed and first brought to notice the Southern Pacific route through Texas, the Paso del Norte, and Arizona, which was obliterated by the war of the Rebellion. He also prepared three valuable works for publication, namely, "Notes of a Military Reconnoissance from Fort Leavenworth to San Diego," "Notes of Travel in California," and "The Report of the United States and Mexican Boundary Commission." Major Emory joined his regiment in Kansas and served during the border troubles of 1857, participated in the Utah expedition of 1858, and was stationed in the Indian Territory in 1859. He was a member of a board of officers which was convened January-April, 1860, to revise the programme of instruction at the Military Academy. He was then appointed an inspector-general, and made a tour of inspection on the Pacific coast, and returned to Washington in the early part of 1861, when he was informed by the general-in-chief that the political state of the country made it necessary for him to rejoin and assume the command of his regiment, then serving in the Indian Territory. He delayed, while en route, two weeks at Fort Smith, Ark., waiting for the arrival of certain persons who had promised, in the presence of General Scott, to meet him there in the interests of the government; but as they did not come, and learning that another officer had been detailed for the position which he had relinquished, he fell into the error of believing that he had been ordered to distant service that the obstacle might be removed which prevented the appointment of another to that office, and he forwarded his unconditional resignation and resumed his journey; but receiving on the same day a dispatch announcing that hostilities had begun at Fort Sumter, he immediately, by letter and telegram, recalled the resignation, dismissed all personal feelings from his mind, and hastened forward to his new field of duty, traveling mainly by night, without an escort, and upon arrival at Fort Washita late in April found himself the senior officer on the northern frontier of Texas. He was overtaken near Perryville by a Confederate agent, who informed him that the Texas insurgents were prepared to capture the military stations in the Indian Territory, as had already been accomplished in that State, and that the troops would be held as prisoners of war unless they joined the insurrectionary forces: the agent then announced that he was authorized to offer Major Emory the command of the Confederate forces in that section with the rank of a major-general, but the emissary received such an emphatic and indignant refusal that he drove away more rapidly than he had approached. The orders which Major Emory had received from the general-in-chief were conditional. If affairs remained unchanged he was to establish himself at Fort Arbuckle; but if Arkansas should pass an ordinance of secession he was to assume command of the troops in the Indian Territory, including the garrison at Fort Smith. The failure of the persons heretofore mentioned to meet him at Fort Smith, and the incident at Perryville, convinced him that not only Texas but also Arkansas and the Indian Territory were in a state of insurrection, and that a conspiracy existed to capture the United States troops in that section. He therefore determined to proceed to Fort Washita instead of Fort Arbuckle, and exercise his authority to the utmost limit for the purpose of defeating the plans of the enemy; and upon his own responsibility, he ordered a rapid concentration of the cavalry at Fort Washita and of the infantry at Fort Arbuckle, with the intention of holding both posts until he was reinforced or directed to retire. But he met at the threshold of these movements the physical obstacle of a deficiency of transportation, and above all the moral obstacle of a want of belief by those under his command that a rebellion against the United States was already begun or that any necessity existed for such a concentration, while the commanders of all the posts, except Fort Smith, insisted that he was exceeding his authority, exposing the frontiers to hostile Indians, and affording the secessionists an excuse and opportunity to rise against the government. They carried this opposition so far as to forward their protests to the War Department. But before five companies had assembled at Fort Washita the condition of affairs became so critical and the enemy's forces moving against him so great that he was compelled to abandon the country. He did not act a day too soon. The enemy moved so rapidly that it became impossible to carry out his original plans. He abandoned Fort Washita, first destroying all supplies that he could not take with him, and moved to the rear of Fort Arbuckle, ordering the companies which had been directed to assemble there to join him prepared for a forced march to the open prairies. Fort Arbuckle was abandoned on the 4th of March after the flag had been lowered with military honors, and the concentration as ordered was successfully accomplished, except the garrison from Fort Cobb, which joined him on the third day thereafter. Just then an officer reported to Major Emory with dispatches from General Scott, directing him to do precisely what had already been done; but if he had waited for these instructions before taking any action not a soldier would have escaped. On the same day the advance guard of the enemy came in view. A squadron of cavalry was detached with orders to capture them, which was successfully accomplished, and Major Emory then learned that the enemy, four thousand strong, were within a day's march of his rear, while another force of two thousand men were marching from Arkansas towards Fort Gibson, expecting that the United States troops would pass that post, as it was on the line of the shortest route to Kansas, and where, if the Texans failed to overtake them, the Arkansas troops could intercept their retreat and capture them, or hold them in check until reinforcements arrived. The judicious action of Major Emory had thus far anticipated the wishes of the general-in-chief, and as there was no object to be gained by holding his command in that country, and being unable to contend against the overwhelming numbers which were threatening his rear and flank, he marched rapidly towards Fort Leavenworth, where he arrived on the 31st of May, without the loss of a man, a horse, or a wagon, and won the conspicuous honor of being the only officer on the frontiers who had baffled the designs of the enemy and brought his entire command out of the insurrectionary country. The forces thus rescued from capture by his judgment and energy consisted of five companies of cavalry, seven companies of infantry, and four pieces of artillery. These troops were of great importance beyond the consideration of numbers, as their timely arrival restored confidence to the friends of the government in that section, while they formed the nucleus of General Lyon's army and probably prevented the secessionists from forcing Missouri into the rebellion. His promotion to the lieutenant-colonelcy of the Fourth (old First) Cavalry, to date from January 31, 1861, was announced, on the 3d of April, in orders from the War Department; but upon his arrival at Fort Leavenworth he learned to his surprise that his resignation as a major had been accepted, to date from May 9, 1861. He immediately repaired to Washington, when the President tendered him the lieutenant-colonelcy of the Sixth (old Third) Cavalry, to date from May 14, 1861. He accepted the appointment and proceeded, in July, to Pittsburg, Pa., where he recruited and organized the entire regiment, and then moved it in the latter part of August to Bladensburg, where the men were mounted and prepared for the field. The regiment was then ordered to Washington, and served in the defenses of the city during the winter of 1861-62. He participated in the Manassas and Virginia Peninsular campaigns, moving with his regiment early in March against the enemy, who were abandoning their works at Centreville, Va., and pursued the rear-guard to Warrenton Junction, when he was ordered to Alexandria, and on his way to that place was appointed a brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from March 17, 1862, and was soon thereafter placed in command of the brigade of regular cavalry, with which he embarked at Alexandria and proceeded to Hampton Roads. He participated in the siege of Yorktown, where on the morning of the evacuation he was ordered to the front, and by a prompt and vigorous pursuit intercepted the enemy's rear-guard; but his forces being inadequate to hold them without reinforcements, they succeeded in escaping under cover of the night. He was left with his command to guard the branch of the Lee's Mill road which leads to Allen's farm, and the next morning it was ascertained that the enemy's right at Williamsburg could be turned by this route. Troops were sent to him with orders to make the attack; but because of a lack of knowledge of the ground and the lateness of the hour he did not succeed in the movement, which, if successful, might have produced important results. General Emory commanded the brigade of regular cavalry at the battle of Hanover Court-House, where he distinguished himself by separating the wings of the Confederate army, capturing many prisoners, including a North Carolina regiment, and in pushing his cavalry to the front and right, effectually destroying the railway bridges between Hanover Junction and the Chickahominy, and driving the enemy out of Ashland. He was twice thanked on the field by the general commanding for the success of his brilliant operations, and at a later day received the brevet of colonel, to date from May 27, 1862, for gallant and meritorious services. After General Stuart's celebrated raid around the Army of the Potomac, which General Emory attempted to intercept with the Sixth Pennsylvania Lancers where the Yorktown road crosses the Pamunkey and Richmond Railway, he was chiefly employed on outpost duty in guarding the line of the Pamunkey up to Hanover Court-House until the Confederates, under General Jackson, passed down and opened the battle of Gaines' Mill. He was then to the rear, and on the left flank, of the enemy, occupying Hanover Old Church, with his scouts covering the road to Hanover Court-House. He at once destroyed all the crossings on the Tolopotamy, obstructed the highways, and assembled his forces where the road crossed the main highway to Richmond. The enemy, however, passed to the left, but their progress was seriously impeded by the activity of General Emory's skirmishers. About noon on the 26th of June he was ordered to fall back to Old Church, which he was reluctant to do, as he was well to the rear, and on the left flank, of the enemy, and in an advantageous position to attack; but the order being repeated, he slowly retired as the National forces were pressed back by the enemy, still holding the Pamunkey road and being most of the time to the rear of the enemy's left flank, until he was ordered, with other forces, to cover the retreat at the White House Landing, from which point General McClellan had determined to transfer the National base of supplies to the James River. General Emory was then ordered to Yorktown, where, after a brief service, he embarked his brigade at Hampton Roads, and arrived at Harrison's Landing about the 4th of July, when, it being deemed impracticable to continue the organization of the brigade, he was assigned to the command of the First Brigade, Second Division, of the Fourth Army Corps. He retained this command while the army remained at Harrison's Landing and during the retrograde movement to Yorktown, which place he was ordered to occupy and prepare for defense—a task involving great labor, not only in reconstructing the works, but also in leveling the approaches which had been thrown up by the Army of the Potomac during the siege of the preceding April. He was relieved from this duty, at his own request, for field service about the end of September and ordered to Baltimore, where he was placed in command of the new troops at that place for the purpose of organizing a division. On the 10th of November he embarked with six regiments on ocean steamers and sailed to Old Point, where he was joined by other regiments and placed in command of all the forces, numbering about twelve thousand men. He sailed on the 4th of December, with sixteen vessels, for Ship Island, where he arrived on the 13th, and thence, six days later, for New Orleans, where he arrived on the 21st, and on January 3, 1863, he was placed in command of the troops at Carrollton, La., and of the Third Division of the Nineteenth Army Corps. He moved his division, in March, to Baton Rouge, and, on the 13th, marched thence and attacked Port Hudson to create a diversion to enable Admiral Farragut to pass that place with his fleet. He then proceeded to the Teche country, where, on the 13th of April, he attacked Bisland, a strongly fortified camp of the enemy, the defense of which was aided by gunboats. His division made the direct attack, which drove the Confederates within their works and forced their retreat during the night, which he followed to Alexandria, marching one hundred miles in four days. He was assigned, in June, to command the defenses of New Orleans while General Banks' army was occupied with the siege of Port Hudson. He had only sixteen hundred men, and, this fact coming to the knowledge of the enemy, a large army was moved against the city, either to capture it or force an abandonment of the siege of Port Hudson; but General Emory was equal to the emergency, and when the enemy crossed the Plaquemine and moved down the Bayou Lafourche for the purpose of seizing Brashear City and attacking New Orleans in the rear, he dispatched all his forces to the place where the railway crossed the Bayou Lafourche, and in two engagements (June 21-22) defeated the enemy with a severe loss, but Brashear City was cut off and fell into their hands. The enemy then moved against Fort Butler, at Donaldsonville, which had been left almost without a garrison, notwithstanding the works commanded the passage of the river. General Emory succeeded, with the assistance of the naval forces, in reinforcing the fort, and then awaited the assault, which was begun with great vigor about one o'clock A.M. on the 28th of June, and handsomely repulsed with a heavy loss to the enemy. He then returned his forces to New Orleans, and was actively engaged in strengthening the defenses of the city when the fall of Port Hudson, on the 8th of July, relieved the place from further danger, and he was returned to the command of his division in the Nineteenth Corps. A few weeks later he was compelled to go North for medical treatment, and upon his return (about which time he was promoted to the colonelcy of the Fifth Cavalry, to date from October 27, 1863) joined the army at New Iberia, and was assigned to the command of the First Division of the Nineteenth Corps, and moved to Franklin, where he commanded the corps during a part of January, 1864. His division moved in March, 1864, as a part of the Red River expedition, and met the fleet, under Admiral Porter, at Alexandria. The enemy attacked the advance-guard of the army at Sabine Cross-Roads on the 8th of April, driving them back with considerable loss and capturing a large number of guns and wagons. General Emory, then in the rear, was ordered to the front, and, after a rapid march of three miles, met the men, who were retreating with the report that they had been badly defeated. Failing to check them, he moved forward at a double-quick and formed a single line of battle in an advantageous position on the brow of a hill. The enemy came dashing on in three disorderly columns, evidently believing that they had only to fight a retreating rear-guard, but they received such a steady and terrific fire that within half an hour they retreated and disappeared from his front. His prompt and decisive conduct upon this occasion rescued General Banks' army from a great peril, if not from an irretrievable disaster, and if there had been any cavalry available at the moment when he so successfully repulsed the enemy they could have retaken all the guns and wagons which had been captured during the morning. The army retired during the night to a position in front of the village of Pleasant Hill, where it was reformed, with the right of General Emory's division resting on the edge of a swamp, while the left, extending into an open field, was to be supported by the Seventeenth Corps. On the afternoon of the 9th the enemy drove in the pickets, and having discovered the exposed condition of the left flank at once attacked it, and completely enveloped the First and Second Brigades of his division; but a part of the Seventeenth Corps coming to his assistance, a counter-charge was handsomely made, which not only resulted in recovering the position, but also in routing the enemy and driving them from the field. Meanwhile the fleet was compelled, owing to the low stage of water, to steam down the river. This forced the army to abandon Pleasant Hill and retire to Grand Ecore, whence was begun the march for Alexandria, and upon arrival at Cheneyville it was ascertained that the enemy intended to dispute the crossing at Cane River. General Emory was informed about midnight by General Franklin, who was in command during the temporary absence of General Banks, that he was suffering too much from a wound to ride on horseback and that the command was passed to him. General Emory gave such orders as seemed necessary, and at daybreak (April 23) marched against the enemy and found them strongly posted and prepared for battle. He engaged attention by an attack in front while two strong forces were moved across the river, above and below the crossing, and as the force from above struck the enemy's rear and flank General Emory vigorously pushed the attack in front, when the enemy became panic-stricken and fled from the field. The crossing of the army was then accomplished without further molestation, and it arrived at Alexandria in time to assist the fleet over the bar which obstructed the passage at that place, when the fleet continued down the river and the army resumed the march towards Atchafalaya. He succeeded, on the 4th of May, to the command of the Nineteenth Corps, and a few days later was engaged with the enemy at Marksville. He received for his services in this campaign the brevet of major-general of volunteers, to date from July 23, 1864, and two days later was assigned, by direction of the President, to duty according to his brevet rank. The army separated at Atchafalaya, and General Emory was sent to Morganzia with instructions to prepare his troops for a participation in the attack on Mobile; but when he was ready to embark for this service the order was countermanded and he was dispatched, early in July, with two divisions of his corps to City Point, and upon arrival at Fort Monroe was ordered to co-operate with the Sixth Corps in the defense of Washington, which place he reached with the advance of his command on the day that General Early threatened the city. His arrival was very timely, as on the morning of the 11th of July General Early was near the fortifications covering the northern approach to the capital, and in the afternoon the Confederate infantry were in front of Fort Stevens. It is now on record in the War Department that the Confederates had a full knowledge of the arrival of the Nineteenth Corps, and that this was one of the considerations which determined General Early to retire. General Emory was at once dispatched in pursuit of the retreating enemy, who were followed to the crossing of the Shenandoah, where an order was received to retire to the Monocacy, whence the troops were moved by rail to Harper's Ferry and the adjacent country. Shortly thereafter the several corps were united as the Army of the Shenandoah. A succession of marches, countermarches, and combats ensued until the 19th of September, when the battle of Winchester was fought; here General Emory was conspicuously engaged, and, with his corps, contributed largely to the brilliant success of the day, although, owing to a delay occasioned by the movement of the Sixth Corps, the head of his column did not arrive on the field of battle until mid-day. This delay was charged by Mr. Swinton as the fault of General Emory—an injustice which he afterwards corrected in a revised edition of his history. A few days later General Emory participated in the battle of Fisher's Hill, where his corps (with the Sixth) attacked, at noon, the strongly-intrenched camp in front, by the main road, and captured the rifle-pits; and then, under the fire of the enemy's guns, opened trenches, erected earth-batteries, and held the position until the Eighth Corps turned General Early's flank and sent him whirling up the Valley. His corps pursued the enemy all night, having an engagement with the rear-guard, and arrived at Woodstock at daybreak the next morning. The pursuit was continued to Harrisonburg, when the army was recalled and encamped on the east side of Cedar Creek, where was fought, on the 19th of October, the last battle of the war for the possession of the Shenandoah Valley, and where the steadfastness of the Nineteenth Corps, after the first surprise, did much to hold the enemy in check during the disasters of the morning and contributed largely to the splendid victory of the afternoon. The defeat of the Eighth Corps about daybreak left the Nineteenth Corps exposed in flank and rear; but the men always paraded at reveille under arms, and this custom, together with the fact that a large part of the corps was to have made a reconnaissance that morning and was at breakfast when the attack was made, saved it from sharing the fate of the Eighth Corps. General Emory had two horses killed under him during the first quarter-hour of the battle. When the fog lifted at eight o'clock A.M. the men of the corps had done some good fighting, retained their organization and obeyed their officers, although they had passed through a fearful ordeal. A part of their artillery had been abandoned, while portions of the corps had made a desperate resistance and had met with severe losses under very depressing circumstances—the crossing of the corps over Meadow Creek for the purpose of rallying the men having been made at the sacrifice of nearly half the One Hundred and Fourteenth New York Volunteers, which nobly held the enemy in check until the crossing could be effected. While in the confusion and uncertainty of the first attack the corps had lost many men, it was steady the remainder of the day, and the men reformed after crossing Meadow Creek, with greatly depleted ranks, but with unabated courage, which was strengthened by the presence of their skillful and vigorous commander; their crowning triumph of the day was the charge made by the First Division—the beginning of the end—

which sealed the fate of General Early on that field and in the Shenandoah Valley, and drove him behind the intrenchments of Fisher's Hill. General Emory received the brevet of brigadier-general, to date from March 13, 1865, for services at the battle of Fisher's Hill and during the campaign in the Shenandoah Valley; and the brevet of major-general, to date from March 13, 1865, for services at the battle of Cedar Creek; and on the 7th of November he was assigned, by the President, to the permanent command of the Nineteenth Corps. The army was established in winter-quarters near Winchester until February, 1865, when General Sheridan moved up the Valley with his cavalry to raid in the rear of the enemy, leaving General Emory in command of the forces remaining at that place. The Nineteenth Corps was discontinued in March, and he was then placed in command of the Department of West Virginia, with his headquarters at Cumberland, Md. He continued in this position until January 15, 1866, when he was mustered out of volunteer service as a major-general, having been commissioned in that grade Sept. 25, 1865. He assumed the command of the regiment at Washington City in March, 1866, which he retained until November, 1871, and was also employed during this period in command of the garrison and Department of Washington, 1866-68, and the command of Fort McPherson and the District of the Republican, in the Department of the Platte, 1869-71. He also served, in 1860, as a member of the Examining Board on civilian appointments to the army, as a member of a Retiring Board in 1867, and as a member of the Cavalry Tactics Board in 1868-69. He was detached from the regiment in November, 1871, and assigned to the command of the Department of the Gulf, with his headquarters at New Orleans, and remained on this duty until March, 1875, when he was relieved and placed on waiting orders. The full history of affairs in Louisiana during this period is not yet given to the public, but events thus far transpired seem to justify his official acts while he was exercising that command, which was the most difficult he ever had, and, all things considered, the most successful; but a discussion would involve some criticism and a knowledge which no person could possess without having been at New Orleans during his administration. When the President became acquainted with all the facts he apparently regretted that he had yielded to the demand for a change of department commander, and strongly advocated General Emory's promotion upon his retirement from active service. He returned to duty in October, 1875, as president of a Retiring Board, and so continued until July 1, 1876, when he was retired from active service under an Act of Congress of June 26, 1876, with the rank of a brigadier-general as a recognition of long and faithful service, embracing a period of forty-three years, during ten of which he had discharged the duties of a general officer. His home is in Washington City, where he is universally esteemed, and he enjoys a national reputation as a gallant soldier who has devoted the best years of an active life to the service of his country.

McIntosh, John B. Born in Fla. Appointed from at large. Second lieutenant in the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry June 8, 1861, and joined at Darnestown, Md., on the 27th of June, and participated in General Patterson's Shenandoah campaign, and was engaged in the action at Falling Waters and in the skirmishes near Martinsburg and Bunker Hill. He was constantly employed on picket and reconnaissance duty until the 14th of September, when he was transferred to Washington and served in the defenses of the city during the winter of 1861-62. He participated in the Manassas, Virginia Peninsular, and Maryland campaigns, and was engaged in the skirmish at Cedar Run, where he led his squadron in a charge against the enemy's pickets and forced their retreat across the stream; the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg, and in almost daily skirmishes with the enemy during the advance towards Richmond; the battle of Hanover Court-House and the reconnaissance towards Ashland. He was appointed, on the 11th of June, quartermaster and commissary of the Regular Cavalry Brigade, and continued on that duty until the 10th of July, and displayed much energy and ability in conducting his train to Malvern Hill and thence to Harrison's Landing. He was assigned by General McClellan, on the 11th of July, to the command of the Ninety-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, the colonel having been killed in action. He obtained permission to wait upon the governor of Pennsylvania and solicit the colonelcy of that regiment, and, having been provided with favorable letters from Generals McClellan, Newton, and Franklin, he presented them in person; but the governor, while recognizing the recommendations of these distinguished officers, considered it his duty to bestow the commission upon the lieutenant-colonel, whereupon Lieutenant McIntosh returned at once to the regiment. He was engaged in the skirmish at Sycamore Church, where he made a gallant charge upon the enemy, and was specially commended in the report of General McClellan for his conduct. He was distinguished in a skirmish in the White Oak Swamp (where the Eighteenth Virginia Cavalry was defeated), and won the brevet of major, to date from August 5, 1862, for gallant and meritorious services. He served with the regiment as a part of the rear-guard of the Army of the Potomac during the evacuation of the Peninsula, and was engaged in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, the pursuit of the enemy to the Potomac, and the skirmish near Shepherdstown. He was promoted a first lieutenant June 27, 1862, and was appointed colonel of the Third Pennsylvania Cavalry November 15, 1862, and immediately assumed command of his regiment, and was actively employed during the winter of 1862-63 in maintaining an extended picket-line on the right flank of the National army. He was ordered, on the 15th of February, 1863, to destroy the Orange and Alexandria Railroad bridge at the Rappahannock station. A division of infantry ordered to create a diversion in his favor was forced, by severe storm, to return on the first day. He was informed of the withdrawal of the infantry support and authorized to return, if, in his judgment, the storm would prevent a successful execution of his orders. He decided to push forward, and towards the end of the second day had his command (five hundred cavalrymen) concealed in a belt of woods contiguous to the bridge. He there received another message authorizing him to return without executing his orders; but he continued his preparations for the attack, and when all was ready moved rapidly towards the bridge and drove the enemy across the stream. He then dismounted his men, formed a skirmish-line on the banks, and held the position, under the fire of the enemy, while his axe-men cut the supports of the bridge and burnt it, and also destroyed a small bridge across Tin-pot Run. He worked all night, and, having executed his orders, started for the main army, which he rejoined on the 18th of February, and was deservedly complimented upon the successful termination of his hazardous undertaking. When General Hooker reorganized, in January, 1863, the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac into a cavalry corps, Colonel McIntosh was selected to command the Second Brigade of the Second Division. He was engaged with his brigade in the action at Kelly's Ford, March 17, 1863, which was the first cavalry combat of the war in which a division was engaged on either side. General Averill, who commanded the Second Division, reported to the Secretary of War that "to the intrepidity, promptitude, and excellent judgment of McIntosh on that occasion our success was chiefly attributable." He commanded his brigade in the battle of Chancellorsville, and was first engaged with the enemy's cavalry, which were driven from Kelly's Ford, on the Rappahannock, beyond Rapidan station, thus covering the operations of General Buford's column under General Stoneman, and insuring his unobstructed march to the rear of General Lee's army. He was then recalled to the main army (crossing at Ely's Ford) while the battle of Chancellorsville was in progress. He was transferred, on the 22d of June, to the command of the First Brigade of the Second Division, then commanded by General (D. M. M.) Gregg, and participated in the Pennsylvania campaign, and was engaged on the right of the National army at the battle of Gettysburg, where he resisted General Stuart's efforts to turn that flank, and began the cavalry combat almost immediately after his brigade had relieved General Custer, who was ordered to join General Kilpatrick on the left of the army. Being convinced that the enemy's cavalry were in force near his right front, he ordered a regiment to advance and take possession of a stone barn intermediate between the two lines, and then press the enemy's pickets. This movement having developed that the enemy were in the woods to the right of the Hanover road, Colonel McIntosh moved with the other regiments of his brigade to the support of his advanced line, and, finding himself greatly outnumbered, called for reinforcements, which were promptly furnished by sending General Irwin Gregg's brigade to his assistance and ordering the immediate return of General Custer's brigade. General Gregg then assumed command of the entire force, and a stubborn cavalry combat raged for some time, and until Colonel McIntosh, who had pushed a regiment well down on the enemy's flank, ordered a charge, which was handsomely executed, and after several charges and counter-charges the enemy withdrew from that flank of the National army. On the morning of the 4th he was dispatched to the left and instructed to march thence to Emmitsburg and intercept the Confederate cavalry. He arrived at the town at half-past seven o'clock A.M. of the 5th, to learn that the main body had passed two hours in advance of his arrival; but, finding a squadron serving as a rear-guard for the infantry, he charged it so vigorously that the commanding officer in his hasty retreat dropped a letter which indicated the position each Confederate corps would occupy that night. This letter, which gave the first information of the exact whereabouts of the corps of the Confederate army, was at once forwarded to the cavalry headquarters. He then pushed his command over the mountains and overtook the rear of one of the Confederate corps, which he attacked so vigorously that it was compelled to form a skirmish line to the rear. At this juncture he was ordered to report to General Sedgwick, when he was attached to a brigade of infantry, and the united force was instructed to pursue the enemy over the mountains by the same road from which he had just been recalled. This movement was continued to Waynesboro', when he moved to Leitersburg, where he had a sharp action with the enemy's infantry, and a few days thereafter he rejoined the main army at Funkstown, Md. He was made a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from July 3, 1863, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Gettysburg. After the Confederate army had recrossed the Potomac at Williamsport, Md., he was ordered to Harper's Ferry, where, with his division, he crossed the river and marched on Shepherdstown, and engaged the enemy's cavalry (under General Fitzhugh Lee) in an obstinate all-day fight, but at nightfall the contending forces evacuated their positions. He then moved to Warrenton, and during August and until the 13th of September was employed on picket and reconnaissance duty, when he was ordered to cross Hazel Run and approach Culpepper from the right. The entire cavalry corps moving forward, a warm engagement followed, and the enemy retired behind the town, having suffered a considerable loss in men and guns. Colonel McIntosh, with his brigade on the right, again encountered the enemy soon after leaving Culpepper and forced them into a retreat, which he followed all day, and encamped for the night near Cedar Mountain. He was again engaged on the 14th and 15th at the Rapidan, across which river the enemy had retired. He then returned to Culpepper, and marched thence with his brigade to Catlett Station to guard the Orange & Alexandria Railroad, and continued on that duty until the 1st of October, when he was severely injured by a fall from his horse and sent to Washington for medical treatment, where he remained until the 14th, when he was appointed commandant of the cavalry station at Giesboro' Point, and continued in command of the station, drilling, equipping, and mounting new regiments of cavalry and sending them to the front, until May 4, 1864, when he rejoined the army of the Potomac, and was assigned, on the 5th, to command the First Brigade of the Third Cavalry Division, which was then at Parker's Store, on the Orange & Alexandria Railroad. Upon his arrival there he found only one regiment of his brigade (the others having gone to Todd's Tavern), and at once deployed it as skirmishers, being convinced that a heavy infantry force was moving against him, which proved to be so. He held his position with great tenacity, fell back slowly, and twice endeavored to have the force on his right extended to the left so as to cover the plank-road; but failing to receive any assistance, he communicated with General Meade, stating his position. In a short time an answer came to hold the road until a division of the Sixth Corps could relieve him. When it arrived his skirmish line had been forced back to within fifty yards of the Brock road. In the mean time the Second Corps, commanded by General Hancock, which had crossed Ely's Ford, was recalled from Todd's Tavern, and, taking a position on the left of the division of the Sixth Corps, the line at Parker's Store, which Colonel McIntosh had been compelled to abandon, was retaken. He was entitled to great credit for his quick conception of the situation and the prompt action taken to obtain reinforcements to hold the position. The other regiments of his brigade having returned with the Second Division, he assumed command at the Burnt Chimneys, and was continuously engaged on the left of the army until the right of the Sixth Corps had been driven from the Germania plank-road, and a dispatch had been forwarded to headquarters that the enemy held the Germania Ford and the road leading from it. He was then moved to the right to ascertain the condition of affairs, but while his brigade was deployed and approaching the road he was ordered to return to the left. He informed General Meade of his movement and the order just received, when he was instructed to execute the original order; and by invitation he accompanied General Meade to General Sedgwick's headquarters, and, after some conversation had passed between the two generals, volunteered to ascertain the true condition of affairs. Taking two aides, he rode rapidly down the plank-road toward the ford, and, having ascertained that the reports were not true, sent a dispatch to General Sedgwick which informed him of the situation, and remained on the ground directing the movements of the cavalry on that flank and pushing the force to the front so far as possible to ascertain the exact position of the enemy. These arrangements being completed, he returned to the headquarters, to find Generals Grant and Meade already mounted and about to begin the first grand flank movement to the left. He then recalled his brigade and returned to the left of the army, where he rejoined his division. On the 8th of May he was ordered with the Second Cavalry Division to Spottsylvania, his brigade having the advance, and, finding the court-house occupied by the enemy, he charged and drove them away, and captured the town and many prisoners. He then moved to the right and attacked General Longstreet's corps in the rear, and only withdrew when ordered to do so by General Sheridan. On the 10th of May (the cavalry corps being on the march towards Richmond for the purpose of destroying General Lee's communications with that city) he covered the crossing of the South Anna River at Squirrel Bridge, and protected the cavalry corps from a determined attack in the rear. He defeated General Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry at Hanover Court-House on the 30th of May and captured the town; and on the 1st of June, with only three regiments of his brigade (the other three being detached to destroy the bridges across the South Anna River), he defeated, after heavy fighting, three brigades of the enemy at Ashland, but was subsequently so hard pressed by overwhelming numbers that he was compelled to retire down the railroad towards the South Anna River, losing only a few horses and taking with him all the wounded men who could bear moving. He was made a brevet colonel, to date from June 1, 1864, for gallant and meritorious services upon that occasion. He commanded his brigade in the battle of Yellow Tavern, the actions of Strawberry Hill and Meadow Bridge, the skirmish near Mechanicsville, the battles of Hawes' Shop and Bethesda Church, and during the flank movement of the Army of the Potomac from Cold Harbor to James River he covered the right flank and assisted in holding the country between Malvern Hill and White Oak Swamp during the passage of the James River. He also commanded his brigade during Wilson's raid on the Danville and South Side Railroad, and was engaged in the actions at Roanoke Station and Stony Creek, and in the battle of Petersburg. He was promoted a captain December 7, 1863, and in consideration of valuable and conspicuous services was appointed a brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from July 21, 1864. He participated in the Shenandoah campaign, and was engaged in the battle of Winchester, the actions at Summit Point, Charlestown, Halltown (where he covered General Sheridan's flank when falling back), and Kearneysville. His brigade, in connection with the cavalry corps, resisted General Breckinridge in his attempt to cross the Potomac near Shepherdstown. His brigade defeated the enemy's cavalry at the Opequan and forced it to seek safety behind the infantry, and captured the Eighth South Carolina Infantry in a brilliant dash at Abram's Creek on the 13th of September, winning a special mention in the report of General Sheridan, and on the 19th of September, when in the advance, he destroyed the enemy's picket and skirmish-line, and again defeated their cavalry at the Opequan at daybreak and forced it behind the infantry, and then charged the latter, which was protected by earthworks, driving the entire force, and, taking possession of the key position of the battle-field, held it by stubborn fighting until eight o'clock A.M., when he was relieved by the advance of the 18th Corps. Gen. Wilson, writing of his conduct upon that occasion, says: "The gallantry and determination of Gen. McIntosh in this part of the action were most conspicuous, and I venture to say, had the ground which he gained by his first dashing attack not been held till the infantry had taken position and prepared for battle, the day could not have been gained by our troops." Later in the day the Third Cavalry Division was moved to the left, where, after making a reconnoissance, and finding the enemy's cavalry on that flank, he brought down the Fifth N. Y. Cavalry, and in making a charge to determine their strength was shot in the right leg and carried from the field. The bones of the leg were completely shattered and he was compelled to submit to an amputation of the limb. This misfortune closed a brilliant career of field-service, and at a time when he was prominent for promotion to the grade of major-general of volunteers. He was always ready and willing, and had made himself a conspicuous figure in every battle in which he had been engaged, and had been frequently named in official reports for energy, coolness, judgment, and gallantry in action. The following brevet commissions, in addition to those already named, were bestowed upon him, to date from March 13, 1865: major-general of volunteers for distinguished gallantry and good management at the battle of Opequan; brigadier-general for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Winchester; and major-general for gallant and meritorious services in the field during the war of the rebellion. His wound disabled him until Feb. 8, '65, when he was assigned to general court-martial duty at Paducah, Ky., where he served until the 5th of May. He was then appointed a member of a board of officers convened at Washington to examine officers for admission into the First Veteran Corps, and afterwards served on general court-martial duty at Annapolis, Md. He was mustered out of volunteer service April 30, 1866, and, without rejoining the regiment, was appointed, in September, 1866, lieutenant-colonel of the Forty-second U. S. Infantry (V. R. C.), to date from July 28, 1866, and was employed during the fall and winter in organizing and drilling his regiment at Hart's Island, N. Y., and in the spring of 1867 was transferred to Plattsburg, N. Y., and afterwards to Madison Barracks, N. Y. He was appointed in December, 1867, deputy-governor of the Soldiers' Home, and served in that position until April 1, 1868. He was then appointed governor of the Home, and held the office until July, when he resigned the position and was assigned to duty in New York City as a member of a Retiring Board, and in March, '69, he was transferred to the list of unassigned officers and ordered, in June, 1869, to California as superintendent of Indian affairs, and discharged the duties of the office until Congress passed a law forbidding officers of the army to hold civil office under the general government. He was retired from active service July 30, 1870, with the rank of brigadier-general, for the loss of his right leg from wounds received in the line of duty.

Johnson, Richard W., was born in Livingston County, Ky. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1849, and assigned to the Sixth Infantry as a brevet second lieutenant, and was appointed in the First Infantry a second lieutenant, to date from June 10, 1850. He joined at Fort Snelling, Minn., where he served until 1851, when he was transferred to Texas, and had stations at Forts Duncan and Terrell until March 3, 1853, when he was appointed adjutant of the First Infantry, and held the position until April 12, 1855, when he was appointed a first lieutenant in the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855. He joined at Louisville, Ky., on the 7th of June, and on the 12th was appointed regimental quartermaster. He soon thereafter proceeded to Jefferson Barracks, where he had station until the 27th of October, when he marched with the regiment to Fort Mason, Texas, where he arrived January 14, 1856, and served as quartermaster and commissary until the 30th of September, when he resigned his staff appointment and thereafter served at Forts Mason and Belknap, and Camps Colorado, Radzimski, and Cooper. He was promoted a captain December 1, 1856, and soon became conspicuous for practical attention to the wants of his company, fondness for drills, and activity in the field. He distinguished himself on the 22d of December, 1856, in a combat with a band of Comanches on the head-waters of the Concho River, where, after a sharp conflict, he defeated the Indians with a severe loss, captured their horses and camp equipage, and rescued a Mexican captive. He participated in the Wichita expedition of 1858, and was engaged in the brilliant action at Wichita Village on the 1st of October. He defeated a party of hostile Indians on the 13th of February, 1860, between Kickapoo and Brady Creeks, and he accompanied Major Thomas during the summer of 1860 in an expedition to the head-waters of the Concho and Colorado Rivers, and was frequently commended in orders from the headquarters of the army and the Department of Texas for services in the field and gallantry in action. He was serving at Fort Mason, commanding a squadron and the non-commissioned staff and band of the regiment, when Texas was surrendered to the insurgents. He could do no better than obey the "Order of Exercises," and he accordingly abandoned the post on the 29th of March, 1861, and marched to Indianola, where he was joined by two other companies. These companies constituted the second detachment of the regiment, and they were embarked on the steamship Empire City just in time to escape capture, and sailed for New York Harbor, and proceeded thence to Carlisle, where they arrived on the 27th of April. He proceeded in June to Chambersburg, Pa., and participated in General Patterson's Shenandoah campaign, and was engaged in the action at Falling Waters and the skirmishes at Martinsburg and Bunker Hill. He availed himself of a leave of absence on the 28th of August for the purpose of accepting the lieutenant-colonelcy of the Third Kentucky Cavalry, and proceeded to Louisville, where he found the community greatly excited because of the invasion of Kentucky by the Confederate General Albert S. Johnston. He was placed in command of the Home Guards, numbering twelve hundred men, and ordered to Lebanon Junction, on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad; but as the enemy halted at Bowling Green, and manifested no intention to advance farther in the direction of Louisville, and as volunteer regiments were dispatched in great numbers to Kentucky, the necessity for the retention of this temporary force ceased to exist and it was disbanded, and he then joined the Third Kentucky Cavalry at Owensboro', where he served until the 11th of October, 1861, when he was appointed a brig.-gen. of volunteers, and assigned to the command of a brigade in General Anderson's army, then in front of Louisville, Ky. He served with the army on the march to Nashville and through Tennessee en route to Pittsburg Landing, until he was prostrated at Columbia, Tenn., by malarial fever and compelled to return to Louisville for medical treatment. He rejoined his brigade after the battle of Shiloh, and participated in the skirmishes (routing the enemy in his front on the 28th of May) and marches of the army during the advance upon Corinth from the 9th of April to the 30th of May, 1862. After the evacuation of Corinth his command formed a part of the Army of the Ohio, under General Buell, on the march through North Alabama, Tennessee, and Kentucky. About this time he was promoted a major in the Fourth Cavalry, to date from July 17, 1862, but never served with his regiment. He was defeated on the 28th of August, 1862, in an engagement with Morgan's Confederate cavalry near Gallatin, Tenn., and while exhibiting great courage in striving to rally his troops was captured by the enemy. He was soon exchanged, and a partial reorganization of the army gave him a division, which he commanded at the battle of Stone River, where he won the commendation of General Rosecrans as an officer who "ought to be made a major-general." He participated in the advance on Tullahoma, June 24 to July 4, 1863, and fought with his division at Liberty Gap, Tenn., on the 24th and 25th of June, one of the fiercest engagements of the war, considering the numbers engaged. His division behaved handsomely at Chickamauga, driving the enemy a mile and a half and capturing seven pieces of artillery, together with a large number of prisoners, arms, and colors, and he was made a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from September 20, 1863, for gallant and meritorious services at that fiercely-contested battle. He participated in the defense of and operations around Chattanooga from September, 1863, to May, 1864, and was engaged in the battle of Missionary Ridge and the pursuit of the enemy immediately thereafter. General Grant, who was so situated as to have a full view of the entire line, says in his report, "The divisions of Baird, Sheridan, and Johnson moved up the hill in line and simultaneously carried the crest of the Ridge." He was made a brevet colonel, to date from November 24, 1863, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Chattanooga. He commanded a division of the Fourteenth Corps, Army of the Cumberland, during the invasion of Georgia, May and June, 1864, and was engaged in the operations around Dalton, the demonstrations against Resaca, and the pursuit of the enemy with constant skirmishing, including the battle of New Hope Church, where he was severely wounded by a shell and compelled to retire from the field. He rejoined his division on the 13th of June and commanded it until the 22d of August, when it became evident that he was too weak to endure the hardships of field service. General Sherman then appointed him chief of cavalry of the Military Division of the Mississippi, and dispatched him to Nashville to equip and forward cavalry from that station; but when the march to the sea was begun and General Hood invested Nashville his occupation was gone, and he reported to General Thomas, who assigned him, on the 8th of November, to the command of a division of cavalry, which he retained until October 12, 1865. He was engaged in the battle of Nashville, and was highly complimented on the field by General Thomas for "skill, energy, and ability," and in the telegraphic report to the President at the end of the first day's battle General Thomas said: "I must not forget to report the operations of Brigadier-General Richard W. Johnson in successfully driving the enemy, with the aid of the gunboats under Lieutenant-Commander Fitch, from their established batteries on the Cumberland below the city of Nashville." He was made a brevet major-general of volunteers to date from December 16, 1864, and a brevet brigadier-general to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Nashville. He was then assigned to the command of the Middle District of Tennessee, and held that highly important civil-military position until January 15, 1866, when he was mustered out of volunteer service and received the brevet of major-general to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services in the field during the war of the Rebellion. He was conspicuous during the war for his skill and energy, and he displayed great personal courage at Stone River, Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge, and during the invasion of Georgia. He was provost-marshall-general of the Military Division of the Tennessee from October 12, 1865, to August 13, 1865, and acting judge-advocate of the same division from December 5, 1865, to August 18, 1866, and of the Department of the Tennessee from August 18, 1866, to March 15, 1867, and of the Department of the Cumberland from March 15, 1867, to October 12, 1867, when he was retired from active service with the rank of major-general (changed to brigadier-general by act of Congress of March 3, 1875, not having "lost a leg or arm") for wounds received in the line of duty. He is the author of a pamphlet entitled "Manual of Arms for Colt's breech-loading Carbine and Navy Revolver," which came into general use as the troops were supplied with these arms. He was the orator at the organization of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland on the 7th of February, 1867, in Mozart Hall, Cincinnati. He was professor of military science in the Missouri State University from July, 1868, to July, 1869, when he, in common with all officers on the retired list, was relieved from duty. The degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by the university. He was elected in September, 1869, professor of military science in the University of Minnesota, but resigned the position January 1, 1871, and engaged in the real estate business at St. Paul, where he has since lived, having business interests at Montrose and Duluth. He has fully disproved the commonly accepted idea that military service disqualifies a man for civil pursuits. His success has demonstrated that the education and experience acquired in the army with reference to system and regularity are the foundations of prosperity in all departments of business and in all the walks of life. He published in the spring of 1881 an admirably written "Memoir of Major-General George H. Thomas," which is recognized as a valuable contribution of material for the use of the future historian of the war of the Rebellion. He was the candidate of the Democratic party for governor of Minnesota at the general election of 1881.

Oakes, James. Born in Pennsylvania. Appointed from Pennsylvania; graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, '46, and was assigned to the Second Dragoons (now Second Cavalry) as a bvt. second lieutenant, and was promoted in that regiment a second lieutenant July 29, 1847, and a first lieutenant June 30, 1851. He served in the war with Mexico, and was engaged in the Chihuahua expedition, the siege of Vera Cruz, the skirmish at Medelin, the battles of Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Churubusco, Molino del Rey, and the operations before, and capture of, the city of Mexico. The skirmish at Medelin was ended by the Second Dragoons, under Major Sumner, charging the stone bridge in column of fours. The leading four consisted of Sumner, Adjutant Neill, Regimental Quartermaster Lowry, and Oakes. The Mexican force was followed several miles on a road which was lined with fences, woods, and undergrowth. Lieut. Oakes, accompanied by Sergeant Lentz and Private Keith, getting ahead of the column, came on the rear of the retreating enemy, when about thirty took a road to the right, while the main body continued on the direct road. He followed the detachment until he had sabred and dismounted nearly all of them, when he returned to his command in the town of Medelin, and was then sent back to the camp near Vera Cruz for medical assistance. He served on the staff of Col. Harney at the battle of Cerro Gordo, and was especially mentioned for distinguished services and gallantry, and was commended in the highest terms by Major Sumner for efficiency at Molino del Rey. He was made a brevet first lieutenant, to date from March 25, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct in the affair at Medelin, and a brevet captain, to date from Sept. 8, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct at the battle of Molino del Rey. He was acting adjutant of the Second Dragoons from April to November, 1847, when he was appointed regimental quartermaster, and served in that position until Aug. 15, 1849. After the Mexican war he was ordered to Texas, where he served until June, 1853, and had stations at Austin, and at Forts Graham, Lincoln, Mason, and Terrett. He was engaged in two combats with the Comanches between the Nueces and Rio Grande on the 11th of July and 12th of August, 1850, and in the latter was twice severely wounded, and he now suffers from the effects of one of the wounds. He was employed on the coast survey from Sept. 29, 1853, to April 4, 1854, and was on cavalry recruiting service at Jefferson Barracks when he was appointed a captain in the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855. He recruited his company at Pittsburgh, and joined at Jefferson Barracks on the 24th of August and marched with the regiment to Texas, and arrived at Fort Mason on the 14th of January, 1856, and was actively employed in the field during the following spring and summer. He overtook a party of Waco Indians on the 22d of February near the head-waters of the Nueces, and severely punished them. He routed a party of Comanches on the 1st of May near the head-waters of the Concho, and on the 30th of August had three engagements with hostile Indians near the junction of the Pecos and the Rio Grande, in which he killed and wounded some and compelled the others to seek safety in Mexico. He was commended in orders from the headquarters of the army for success and gallantry in these affairs. He changed station to Fort Clark in August, 1856, and commanded the post until May, 1858, when he removed with his company to Fort Belknap, where the regiment was ordered to concentrate for the march to Utah; but the order was countermanded, and he returned to Fort Clark and served there until December, 1858, when the condition of his wounds compelled him to accept a sick-leave of absence. He rejoined his company at Fort Inge in February, 1860, where he was serving when the secession movement was inaugurated. He was a man of energy and determined purpose, and when he received Twiggs' "Order of Exercises," which required him to surrender the government property to the State commissioners and march his company to Indianola and there embark for New York, he dispatched couriers to Fort Duncan, Fort Clark, and Camp Wood, and urged a united action for the purpose of moving northward, out of the State, in defiance of the order, and requested that officers might be sent to Fort Inge to discuss the proposition and adopt a plan of action. Unfortunately for his plans, Captain French had abandoned Fort Duncan and started for the mouth of the Rio Grande before the courier arrived there. An answer was returned from Fort Clark that it was impossible to move the four companies of infantry as proposed, because they had no transportation. Lieut. Hood was sent from Camp Wood to make the necessary arrangements, but when he announced his purpose to resign if Kentucky should secede, Captain Oakes said that it was useless for himself to undertake the movement alone, as he had only seven days' rations, and some of the posts farther north were already in the possession of the State troops, having been surrendered before he received the order of exercises. He accordingly started from Ft. Inge on the 19th of March, 1861, and marched his command to Green Lake, where he was again compelled to avail himself of a sick-leave of absence. He then returned to San Antonio to await the arrival of the last troops before leaving the State, and while there learned that it was intended to capture the infantry under the command of Col. Reeve, in violation of the agreement made with the insurgents. Although in feeble health, he volunteered to take his old guide and travel across the country until he met Col. Reeve beyond Fort Clark and turn him back, to leave the State by the way of the El Paso and Santa Fé roads. But the department commander, relying upon the good faith of the insurgents, and perhaps afraid to trust any person because so many were deceiving him, declined the offer, and the result was that the entire command was captured and paroled, and five days after making this offer the department commander and all his staff were in the power of the insurgents. He was then intrusted with dispatches, and made his way out of the State by the way of Austin, Brenham, and Galveston, and escaped capture. He received a vote of thanks, enrolled on parchment, from the Secession Convention for sending an expedition against hostile Indians (under Lieutenant Arnold) after the State had seceded, which resulted in driving them across the Rio Grande; and it may be added that for performing this service he was reprimanded by the department commander. He was promoted a major in the regiment April 6, 1861, and a few weeks later was appointed a brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from May 17, 1861, which he declined on account of ill health caused by wounds received in action, being unwilling to draw the pay when he could not perform the duties of the grade. He relinquished his sick-leave in May and proceeded to Wheeling, Va., where he served on mustering duty until September, when he rejoined and commanded the regiment at Washington until January 14, 1862. He was promoted lieutenant-colonel of the 4th Cavalry, to date from November 12, 1861, and joined his regiment—then serving with the Army of the Ohio—and commanded it during the Tennessee and Mississippi campaign, and participated in the movement on Nashville, the march to Pittsburg Landing, the battle of Shiloh, and the advance on, and siege of, Corinth. He was transferred with his regiment in September, 1862, to the Army of the Mississippi, and was engaged in the battle of Corinth. He was then assigned to mustering and disbursing duty at Jackson, Mich., where he served until April 29, 1863, when he was appointed assistant provost-marshal-general for Illinois, and was stationed at Springfield until September, 1866. He was, at the same time, mustering and disbursing officer and superintendent of the volunteer recruiting service for the State, and also commanded the District of Illinois from September, 1865, to August, 1866. He was made a brevet colonel and a brevet brigadier-general, to date from March 30, 1865, for meritorious and faithful services in the recruitment of the armies of the United States. He was promoted colonel of the 6th Cavalry, to date from July 31, 1866, and joined his regiment at Austin, Texas, on the 1st of February, 1867. He served with it in Texas, the Indian Territory, Kansas, and Arizona, and had stations at Austin, and at Forts Richardson, Riley, Hays, and Lowell, and performed the duties pertaining to a post and regimental commander until April 29, 1879, when he was retired from active service, at his own request, having served over thirty years.

Palmer, Innis N. Born at Buffalo, N. Y. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1846, and assigned to the Mounted Rifles (now Third Cavalry) as a brevet second lieutenant, and was promoted, in that regiment, a second lieutenant, July 20, 1847, and a first lieutenant January 27, 1853. He joined his regiment at Jefferson Barracks, October 29, 1846, and started from that station on the 11th of December for service in the Mexican War, and arrived at Vera Cruz on the 9th of March, 1847. He participated in the siege of Vera Cruz, the battles of Cerro Gordo, Contreras, Churubusco, Chapultepec (severely wounded), and in the assault upon, and capture of, the city of Mexico. He commanded Company B of the police in the city of Mexico from December 18, 1847, to June 5, 1848 (date of leaving the city), and was made a brevet first lieutenant, to date from August 20, 1847, for gallant and meritorious conduct at the battles of Contreras and Churubusco, and a brevet captain to date from September 18, 1847, for gallant conduct at Chapultepec. He returned to Jefferson Barracks in July, 1848, and was employed on regimental recruiting service until September. He served as acting adjutant of his regiment from November 25, 1848, to March 25, 1849, when he was assigned to regimental recruiting service at St. Louis, where he served until May, when he rejoined his regiment at Camp Sumner, near Fort Leavenworth, and marched with it to Oregon City, where he arrived about the 15th of October. He served as acting adjutant of his regiment from October 14, 1849, to May 1, 1850, when he was appointed adjutant, and held the position until July 1, 1854. He served during this period, at Oregon City and Fort Vancouver; and, returning East, served at Jefferson Barracks in 1851, and during the years 1852-54 was employed in Indian campaigns in Texas, and had stations at Forts Merrill, Ewell, and Inge. He was on recruiting service in Baltimore when appointed a captain in the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855. He joined his company at Jefferson Barracks, August 27, 1855, and marched with the regiment to Texas, and arrived at Fort Mason January 14, 1856, where he served until July, when he was assigned to the command of Camp Verde, which he retained until May, 1858, and was employed during January and February, 1858, in operations against hostile Indians near the headwaters of the Brazos and Colorado Rivers.

He returned to Fort Mason in May, 1858, and about one month later proceeded to Fort Belknap, where the regiment was ordered to concentrate for the march to Utah; but the order was revoked, and he was assigned, on the 27th of July, to duty at that post, where he served until January, 1859, when he was ordered to Washington and assigned to special duty until May, when he availed himself of a leave of absence with permission to visit Europe. He returned to duty in October, 1860, and conducted a detachment of recruits to Texas, and rejoined his company at Camp Cooper January 5, 1861. He started from that station on February 21, and marched his company to Green Lake, where he was joined by five other companies, which composed the first detachment of the regiment out of Texas. He then conducted the battalion to Indianola, and there embarked on the steamship Coatzacoalcos, and arrived in New York Harbor on the 11th of April, 1861, and proceeded with Companies D and H directly to Washington, where he was employed in guarding the Treasury building and served in the defenses of the city. He was promoted a major in the regiment April 25, 1861, and commanded the regular cavalry in the Manassas campaign. He was commended in the report of his brigade commander, and was made a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from July 21, 1861, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Bull Run. He served as a member of a board convened at Washington in August, 1861, for the examination of officers who were reported to be unable to perform field service. He commanded the regiment in the defenses of Washington from the 28th of August to the 26th of September, 1861, and was appointed in October a brigadier-general of volunteers, to date from September 23, 1861, and continued to serve in the defenses of Washington until March, 1862, when he participated in the Virginia Peninsular campaign as a brigade commander in the Fourth Corps, Army of the Potomac, and was engaged in the siege of Yorktown and in the battles of Williamsburg, Fair Oaks, Glendale, and Malvern Hill. He was then employed in organizing and forwarding to the field New Jersey and Delaware volunteers, and in superintending camps of drafted men at Philadelphia, until December, 1862, when he was transferred to North Carolina, where he served until June, 1865, and commanded at different periods the First Division of the Eighteenth Army Corps, the Department of North Carolina, the District of Pamlico, the Eighteenth Army Corps, the defenses of Newbern, the Districts of North Carolina and Beaufort, and participated in March, 1865, in General Sherman's movements, and was engaged in the action of Kinston. He was promoted in December, 1863, lieutenant-colonel of the Second Cavalry, to date from September 23, 1863, and was made a brevet colonel and a brevet brigadier-general, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services during the war of the Rebellion, and a brevet major-general of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865, for long and meritorious services. He was mustered out of volunteer service on the 15th of January, 1866, and joined his regiment at Fort Ellsworth, Kan., on the 21st of May, and commanded it until September, when he availed himself of a leave of absence until December, and rejoined the regiment at Fort Laramie, Wyoming, and commanded it until August, 1867, and again from November, 1867, to July, 1868. He was promoted colonel of the Second Cavalry, to date from June 9, 1868. He served as a member of a board convened at Washington to pass upon a system of cavalry tactics from July, 1868, to June, 1869, when he rejoined his regiment and served at Omaha Barracks until September, 1872. He was then transferred, with his regimental headquarters, to Fort Sanders, Wyoming, where he served until the fall of 1876. He also commanded the District of the East Platte during the summer of 1872; served as a member of a Cavalry Equipment Board convened at Fort Leavenworth in 1874, and as a member of a Board on a Carbine Cartridge in 1875. He availed himself of a sick-leave of absence from September, 1876, to March 20, 1879, when he was retired from active service, at his own request, having served over thirty years.

Hunt, Henry J. Born in Mich. At an early age he was taken to the Maumee Valley, in Ohio, from which State, at the age of 16, he was appointed to West Point, and graduated in 1839 as second lieutenant of the Second Artillery, going at once to the frontier at Detroit, where he served during the Canada border troubles. He was promoted to first lieutenant June 18, 1846, and served during the Mexican war with distinction, being engaged at the siege and capture of Vera Cruz March, 1847; Cerro Gordo April, 1847; Churubusco and capture of San Antonio August 20, 1847; Contreras, Molino del Rey (where he was twice wounded) Sept. 8, 1847; storming of Chapultepec Sept. 13, 1847, and the battles and capture of the city of Mexico, Sept. 13-14, 1847. For his gallantry at Contreras and Churubusco he was brevetted captain, and major for Chapultepec. After the Mexican war he served in garrison at Forts McHenry and Monroe and on the Indian frontier until the breaking out of the rebellion. In 1856 he was made a member of the board of artillery officers which prepared the system of tactics and instructions for the use of light artillery which has since been in use in the army. September 28, 1852, he was promoted to captain, and May 14, 1861, was made major of the newly-organized Fifth Artillery. His first service in 1861 was at Harper's Ferry, and next at the defense of Fort Pickens. At the first battle of Bull Run he was in command of all the artillery of the left wing, and after the defeat was engaged organizing the reserve artillery of the Army of the Potomac. September 28, 1861, he was made colonel and aide-de-camp and assigned to command of the artillery reserve corps he had organized, and from that time until the surrender at Appomattox his history was a brilliant part of that of the Army of the Potomac. He was made brigadier-general of volunteers September 15, 1862, the commission being conferred for "specific distinguished service," and July 6, 1864, was brevetted major-general of volunteers for gallantry at Gettysburg and distinguished conduct in the campaign from the Rapidan to Petersburg. He received the brevet of colonel in the army for Gettysburg, brigadier-general for Petersburg, and major-general for gallantry and distinguished conduct during the war. He became lieutenant-colonel Third Artillery August 1, 1863, and colonel Fifth Artillery April 4, 1869. Early in 1862 General Hunt became chief of artillery of the Army of the Potomac, and served in that capacity until the surrender, being the only field officer of artillery whose whole service during the war was with his own arm of the service. His last active duty was in command of the Department of the South, with headquarters at Newport Barracks, Ky. Retired, 1883, by operation of law.

Light Art., a regiment of soldiers was ordered up to support battery; the officers had left it, and he took command and marched the regiment into the fight; President Lincoln was informed by some one of his action, and appointed him 1st lieut. 17 Inf.; accepted Aug. 24, 1861; appointed capt. Feb. 14, 1864; retired Jan. 7, 1865; assigned to duty in Co. B, 2d Batt., 17th U. S. Inf. Took part in the battle of Gettysburg, and on the second day of the fight lost a leg. Remained fourteen hours before surgical attention was received; the amputation was accomplished under fire; subsequent examination showed it to have been most unskillfully done, and led to the conclusion that the saw had been withdrawn before going through, and that the unsawed portion of the bone had been broken off. He was borne away, and remained twenty-four hours without shelter and exposed to the beating of a violent storm. During this time the insufficient dressing came off wounded limb, the flesh flaps were unloosed, and a brother who came to his relief found it infected with vermin. Five months after this he was compelled to submit to an operation for necrosis. This left him with a conical stump; to remove this and thereby be able to wear an artificial limb, another and the third amputation was made on the sixth day of Feb., A. D. 1864. In accordance with special orders reported for duty at Fort Preble, Maine, on the 22d day of July, 1864. While there was in command of two companies Jan. 22, 1869, on duty in Texas, and ordered home, having been in active service for five years; after being retired during this time, was on duty in Colorado, Nebraska, Arkansas.

of New Jersey on the 14th of February, 1802, and was appointed a military store-keeper of the Quartermaster's Department March 23, 1848, and was assigned soon after to duty in the quartermaster-general's office; in May, 1850, he was assigned to the charge of the depot of army clothing and equipage at New Orleans; in April, 1851, he was ordered by the quartermaster-general to accompany Bvt. Brig.-Gen. Whiting, asst. quartermaster-gen., on tour of inspection to the several posts of Texas; when the inspection was concluded the military store-keeper, after a two months' leave of absence, returned to New Orleans in November, 1851, and resumed the charge of the depot of clothing and equipage; in May, 1853, he was assigned to the charge of the clothing and equipage arsenal on Schuylkill, at Philadelphia, and took the accountability of the same on the 1st of July following, and continued in that charge till December, 1857, when he was ordered to San Antonio, Texas, where he took the accountability of the depot of clothing and equipage in March, 1858, and continued in that charge till January or February, 1861, when the place was occupied and the public property seized by a rebel force under Gen. Ben McCulloch. It may be a coincidence of civil war worthy of note that on this occasion the military storekeeper was relieved of accountability by force of arms in the hands of an old friend who was one of his own sureties, for McCulloch's name at that time figured on Potter's bond. The latter was subsequently arrested, and released under parole, along with the other officers of that post; he reported at Washington in May, 1861, and in July following was assigned to the accountability of a new and extensive depot of army cloth and equipage in New York City, in charge of which he continued till December, 1866; while in this position he received, with the rest of his class, the effective rank of captain, by virtue of the act of July 28, 1866; in the fall of 1866 he requested that he should be relieved that he might settle his voluminous accounts; he was relieved accordingly, and the duty of adjusting his accountability occupied about a year, for the property which had rolled in and out of his charge under the confusing pressure of war necessity amounted in value to $120,000,000; awaiting orders till June, 1869, when he was assigned to duty as acting assistant quartermaster at Pittsburg, Pa., where he remained till June, 1873, when he was assigned to Fort Wood, N.Y.H., as post quartermaster; he remained in that position till July 19, 1875, when he was placed on sick-leave, and

King, Charles. Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 18th of June, 1866, and assigned to the 1st Artillery as a 2d lieutenant, and was promoted in that regiment a 1st lieutenant May 15, 1870. He served in the Military Academy as an assistant instructor of artillery until the 28th of August, when he availed himself of the graduating leave of absence, and afterward joined his regiment at Jackson Barracks, New Orleans, on the 30th Nov., where he had station until Feb. 1868, when he was transferred to Sedgwick Barracks, La., and then to Fort Hamilton, N. Y. He was employed on recruiting service at Cincinnati from April to July, 1869, when he was returned to Fort Hamilton. He was an assistant instructor of infantry, cavalry, and artillery, teaching at the Military Academy from Sept. 4, 1869, to Oct. 24, 1871, and was transferred, with his original rank, Jan. 1, 1871, to the 5th Cavalry. He joined the regiment at Fort McPherson, Neb., on the 7th November, 1871, and was immediately appointed an aide-de-camp for Brevet Major-General Emory, commanding the Department of the Gulf, and served at New Orleans (was also acting judge-advocate of the department) from Nov. 1871, to Jan. 31, 1874. He then conducted a detachment of recruits to Arizona, and joined his company at Camp Verde on the 13th May, where he had station until Dec. He participated in the Apache campaign of 1874, and was engaged in the actions at Stauffer's Butte, northeast of Diamond Butte, on the Black Mesa, near the east branch of Verde River, and at Sunset Pass, 18 miles from Little Cottonwood River, Nov. 1, 1874, where he was severely wounded, and compelled to avail himself of tours of detached service and sick-leaves of absence until the 28th Sept., 1875, when he rejoined his company at Fort Riley, Kan. He was nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet captain, to date from 21 May, 1874 (antedated), for gallant and distinguished services in action with Apache Indians near Diamond Butte. He served at Fort Riley until the 17th May, 1876, when he was transferred to Fort Hays, whence he moved by rail with a battalion of the regiment to Cheyenne, and participated in the Sioux campaign in Northern Wyoming, Dakota, and Montana, and served as acting regimental adjutant during the operations in the Black Hills of Wyoming, and in the Big Horn and Yellowstone expedition, and was engaged in the affairs at the South Branch of Cheyenne River, at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., and in the skirmishes at Slim Butte, Dakota. He was adjutant of the regiment from Oct. 5, 1876, to Jan. 28, 1878, having station at Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., and serving as acting assistant adjutant-general of the United States forces assembled at Omaha during the railroad riots of July and August, 1877, and of the Wind River expedition against the Nez Percés during Sept. and Oct. 1877. He continued to have station at Fort D. A. Russell until Sept. 1878, when he availed himself of a sick-leave of absence. He was promoted a captain May 1, 1879, and without joining his company was retired from active service on the 14th Jan., 1879, for disability resulting from a wound received in the line of duty. He is the author of a series of readable sketches entitled "The Fifth Cavalry in the Sioux War of 1876," which was published in the fall of 1880, and of an interesting novel entitled "The Colonel's Daughter, or Winning his Spurs," which was published in the winter of 1882. He was elected in Jan. 1881, professor of military science and tactics in the University of Wisconsin, and is now serving as an aide-de-camp, with the rank of colonel, on the staff of the Governor of Wisconsin.

Woart, John. Born in Mass. Appointed from Pa. After his collegiate studies were concluded he studied law in his native city. Just before he was to be allowed to commence the practice of law he entered his name as a candidate for Holy Orders in the Protestant Episcopal Church. The desire to do so dated back to his earliest recollections. He pursued his divinity studies at the theological seminary in Virginia in order to be near a dear brother who was then residing in that State. His first parish was in Maryland, for one year. His second in New Jersey, for five years. He then removed to Boston, Massachusetts, and was rector of Christ Church in that city for ten years. His health failed somewhat owing to extraordinary duties, and, after remaining one year without a charge, he spent nearly two years in the care of a parish in the western part of that State. For the further benefit of his health he then went to New Orleans, and performed ministerial duties in that city and in St. Mary's Parish, on Bayou Teche, for several years, when he was invited to the rectorship of a church at Dayton, Ohio; from which city, in less than three years, he went to Philadelphia, and officiated in a large parish near that city until the second year of the late rebellion, when his great interest in the struggle then going on induced him to give most of his time to hospitals and afflicted families, unofficially, until he was applied to go to the South as a hospital chaplain. The first few months he was stationed at Savannah. Afterward he took charge of a large hospital at Hilton Head, South Carolina. At the same time, by request of army officers and their families residing there, he acted as chaplain at that post. On the 2d of June, 1866, he was mustered out of the volunteer service and received an appointment as post chaplain at Fort Union, New Mexico. In the autumn of 1869 he was ordered to the Dept. of Dakota, and resided at Ambercrombie until the spring of the year 1873, when he was ordered to Fort Snelling, Minnesota. In the autumn of that year he was ordered to Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he remained until the spring of 1882. In the Dept. of the Missouri and in Dakota he was accustomed to go to different posts not provided with chaplains, and to visit extensive neighborhoods, by permission of department commanders, to render services. Upon leaving Leavenworth he had an order to report for duty to the commander of the Dept. of the Pacific, and was assigned to Angel Island, in the harbor of San Francisco. In July of that year his name was placed upon the Army Retired List by act of Congress. By invitation he went in the following August to Eureka, Humboldt Bay, California, and took charge of Christ Church in that city.

ADJUTANT - GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.

Sheridan, Michael V. Was born in Ohio. He served as a volunteer aide-de-camp for Brigadier-General Sheridan from July 1, 1862, to September 7, 1863, and was engaged in the battles of Booneville (Miss.), Perryville, and Stone River, and was specially mentioned in official reports for valuable services. He served as a second lieutenant in the Second Missouri Volunteers from September 7, 1863, to June 28, 1864. He participated in the Chickamauga campaign, and was engaged in the battle of Chickamauga, the siege of Chattanooga, the battle of Missionary Ridge, the campaign for the relief of Knoxville during the winter of 1863-64, and in the action of Dandridge, Tenn. He accepted, June 29, 1864, an appointment as an aide-de-camp of volunteers, with the rank of captain, to date from May 18, 1864, and served on the staff of Major-General Sheridan until August 1, 1866, and was engaged in the battles of the Wilderness and Todd's Tavern, the action of the Furnaces, the battle of Yellow Tavern, the actions at Meadow Bridge and Richmond, the battles of Tolopotomy and Hawes' Shop, the action at Metadequin Creek, the battles of Cold Harbor and Trevillian Station, the actions at Mallory's Ford, Tunstall Station, St. Mary's Church, Darbytown, and Lee's Mill, and (with the Army of the Shenandoah) in the actions at Kernstown and Berryville; the battles of Opequan and Fisher's Hill, the action at Woodstock, the battle of Cedar Creek, and the action at Waynesboro', and (in the closing Richmond campaign of 1865) in the battles of Dinwiddie Court-House, Five Forks, and Sailor Creek; and was present at the surrender of the Confederate Army of Northern Virginia at Appomattox Court-House, April 9, 1865. He was then transferred to the Division of the Gulf, where he served until August 1, 1866, when he was mustered out of volunteer service. He was appointed, from Ohio, a second lieutenant in the Fifth Cavalry, to date from February 28, 1866, and joined the regiment at Washington, D. C., on the 10th of October, where he served until the 23d, when he was appointed a captain in the Seventh Cavalry, to date from July 28, 1866. He joined his regiment on the 1st of November, and served in Kansas and Colorado until July 1, 1867, when he was appointed an aide-de-camp for Major-General Sheridan, and has served in that position to the present time, having been appointed an aide-de-camp (with the rank of lieutenant-colonel) for the lieutenant-general of the army, August 1, 1870, and military secretary April 9, 1878. He was made a brevet major of volunteers, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant and meritorious services; a brevet major, to date from March 2, 1867, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Opequan; and a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from March 2, 1867, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Fisher's Hill. He was appointed major and assistant adjutant-general June 7, 1883, and is now on duty at the headquarters of the army in Washington.

SENIOR INSPECTOR-GENERAL.

Sacket, Delos B. Born in New York. He was graduated from the Military Academy on the 1st of July, 1845, assigned to the Second Dragoons (now Second Cavalry) as a brevet second lieutenant, and served with that regiment until September, 1846, when he was appointed a second lieutenant in the First Dragoons (now First Cavalry), to date from June 30, 1846. He was promoted, in that regiment, a first lieutenant December 27, 1848. He served in the military occupation of Texas and in the Mexican War, and was engaged in the battles of Palo Alto, Resaca de la Palma, and Monterey, where he was distinguished for gallant bearing. He participated in the famous charge at Resaca de la Palma, where Captain May, with eighty dragoons, captured eight guns and the Mexican General Vega. During the charge his horse was wounded and fell with him into a water-hole. He disengaged himself with great difficulty, and, gaining the bank, seized a horse from a Mexican trooper and rejoined his squadron. He was specially mentioned in the official report of Colonel Twiggs for conspicuous conduct on that occasion, and was made a brevet first lieutenant, to date from May 9, 1846, for gallant and meritorious services at the battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma. He was assigned at the end of the war to duty in the Indian Territory, Arkansas, and New Mexico, where he served until 1850, when, after a brief tour of recruiting service, he was transferred, in December, to the Military Academy as an assistant instructor of cavalry tactics, and was employed on that duty until he was appointed one of the original captains in the First (present Fourth) Cavalry, to date from March 3, 1855. The headquarters of his regiment were established, in orders, at Jefferson Barracks; but shortly thereafter they were transferred to Fort Leavenworth, where he joined after a tour of regimental recruiting service. He was employed in removing intruders from the Indian lands in Kansas, 1855-56; served at Washington in 1857 as a member of a board of officers which was convened to revise the army regulations; and, returning to frontier service, was engaged in quelling the Kansas border disturbances of 1857-58, participated in the Utah and Cheyenne expeditions of 1858 and in the Antelope Hills expedition of 1859. He then availed himself of a leave of absence and visited Europe. Upon his return to the United States he was assigned to Fort Arbuckle, I. T., where he was stationed at the beginning of the war of the Rebellion. He marched, under the command of Major Emory, to Fort Leavenworth, where he arrived late in May. He was promoted a major in his regiment, to date from January 31, 1861, and upon arrival at Fort Leavenworth was informed of his promotion to the lieutenant-colonelcy of the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry, to date from May 3, 1861. He proceeded to Washington, where he arrived about the middle of June, and was assigned to duty with Brigadier-General Mansfield as acting inspector-general, and discharged the duties of the position until the next August, when he was assigned to New York City as a mustering and disbursing officer; on the 1st of October, 1861, he was appointed an inspector-general with the rank of colonel, and served as inspector-general of the Army of the Potomac from December, 1861, to January, 1863; participated in the Virginia Peninsular, Maryland, and Rappahannock campaigns, and was engaged in the battles of Gaines' Mill, Glendale, Malvern Hill, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, and other engagements of less importance. Colonel Sacket was then placed in charge of the inspector-general's office in the War Department, where he served until the latter part of May, 1863, when he was appointed a member of a board of officers which was convened to organize the Invalid Corps. Upon the completion of this duty, in August, he was made a member of a retiring board, and so continued until April, 1864, when he began a tour of inspection which embraced the Departments of the Tennessee, the Cumberland, Arkansas, and New Mexico, and occupied his time until August, 1865, when he returned to New York City, and awaited orders until April, 1866. He was made a brevet brigadier-general and a brevet major-general, to date from March 13, 1865, for gallant, faithful, and meritorious services in the field during the war of the Rebellion. Colonel Sacket made a tour of inspection on the Pacific coast during the summer of 1866, and thereafter served as inspector-general of the Department of the Tennessee and of the Cumberland from November, 1866, to October, 1868. He was then transferred to the Division of the Atlantic, where he served until October, 1872, when he was assigned to duty in the War Department, and acted under the instructions of the Secretary of War until July, 1876. He was then assigned as inspector-general of the Division of the Missouri, and continued to discharge the duties of the position, having station at Chicago, until January 2, 1881, when, having become the senior inspector-general of the army, he was promoted a brigadier-general and transferred to Washington, D. C., where he is now serving.

FIFTH REGIMENT OF CAVALRY.

Montgomery, Robert H. Born in Pennsylvania. He enlisted in the mounted service in August, 1860, and joined the Fifth (old Second) Cavalry at Fort Inge, Texas, in December, 1860, where he served as non-commissioned officer until the State was surrendered to the insurgents, when he marched to Indianola and embarked with the second detachment of the regiment on the steamship Empire City, and sailed for New York, and proceeded thence to Carlisle, where he arrived on the 27th of April, 1861. He participated as a non-commissioned officer in General Patterson's Shenandoah campaign, and was engaged in the action at Falling Waters and in the skirmishes near Martinsburg and Bunker Hill, served in the defenses of Washington during the winter of 1861-62, and in the Manassas, Virginia Peninsular, and Maryland campaigns, and was engaged in the siege of Yorktown, the battle of Williamsburg, and in almost daily skirmishes with the enemy during the advance towards Richmond, the battle of Hanover Court-House, the reconnaissance towards Ashland, the action at Old Church, the reconnaissance towards the White House, the skirmish in the White Oak Swamp, and with the regiment as a part of the rear-guard of the Army of the Potomac during the evacuation of the Peninsula, the battles of South Mountain and Antietam, the skirmish near Shepherdstown, the engagement near Halltown, the skirmishes near Union and Uppererville, the action at Markham Station, the skirmish at Barbee's Cross-Roads, the action at Amisville, the battle of Fredericksburg, and the skirmish and reconnaissance near Falmouth. He was discharged from his enlistment on the 17th of December, 1862, having been appointed a second lieutenant in the Fifth Cavalry to date from November 29, 1862, and commanded a company from December, 1862, to October, 1863. He served during the winter of 1862-63 near Falmouth, Va., and was engaged in March in the action at Kelly's Ford, participated in General Stoneman's raid towards Richmond (April -May), and was engaged in the action near Raccoon Ford (where he captured the men of a Confederate battery), and the skirmish at South Anna Bridge, and during June was engaged in the battle of Beverly Ford, the skirmish at Aldie, and the actions at Middletown and Snicker's Gap. He then participated in the Pennsylvania and Central Virginia campaigns, and was engaged in the battle of Gettysburg, the actions at Williamsport, Boonsboro', Funkstown, and Falling Waters, the engagement at Manassas Gap, the skirmish near Front Royal, the action and battle of Brandy Station, the action at Morton's Ford, and the combat of Bristoe Station. He was made a brevet first lieutenant to date from Dec. 9, 1863, for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Brandy Station, and was recommended in the fall of 1868 by Generals Emory and Merritt for the appointment of brevet major for gallant and meritorious services at the battle of Gettysburg. He was captured October 29, 1863, while on picket duty at Elk Run, Va., and his name was dropped from the rolls of the army; but when the circumstances attending his capture were fully understood he was restored to the service, and rejoined the regiment from a prisoner of war April 29, 1865. He was promoted a first lieutenant April 25, 1865, and served as regimental quartermaster from August 3, 1865, to December 31, 1866, when he was appointed regimental adjutant, and held the position until July 12, 1869. He served during this period at Cumberland, Md., Washington, D. C., and Fort McPherson, Neb., and was also employed from March to December, 1869, as recorder of a board of officers convened at Washington to examine candidates for appointment to the army, and as an aide-de-camp for Brevet Major-General Emory from November, 1867, to August, 1868. He was relieved at his own request from duty as regimental adjutant and participated in the closing operations of the Republican River expedition, and commanded a company in the affair in the sand-hills south of Julesburg and in the Niobrara pursuit, and served as quartermaster of the expedition during September and October, and participated in the affair on Prairie Dog Creek, Kan. He was assigned in November to Fort D. A. Russell, Wyo., where he had station, with occasional tours of field service, until Dec. 12, 1871, and was promoted a captain to date from Jan. 3, 1870. He accompanied the second detachment of the regiment from Fort D. A. Russell by the way of San Francisco and the Gulf of California to Arizona, and arrived at Camp McDowell in January, 1872, where he served until June, when he entered upon a tour of field service which continued until February, 1873, and was engaged in the brilliant combat at Muchos Canon, the affairs on the Santa Maria, in the Red Rock country, and on Pinto Creek. He was then assigned to Camp Grant, where he served until May, when he was transferred to Camp McDowell, and thence to Camp Apache, where he arrived in June. He then availed himself of a leave of absence until October, when he conducted a detachment of recruits to the Pacific coast, and rejoined his company at Camp Apache in January, 1874, and was engaged in November and December in the affairs at Lake and Cañon Creeks. He was twice nominated to the United States Senate to be a brevet major, to date from September 25, 1872, for gallant conduct in the engagement at Muchos Cañon, and a brevet lieutenant-colonel, to date from December 8, 1874, for gallant and distinguished conduct during a reconnaissance made by him through Tonto Basin during November and December, 1874. He had station at Camp Apache until July, 1875, when he conducted a detachment (B, G, I) of the regiment from Arizona to Fort Lyon, Col., whence he moved by rail with his company to Fort Hays, Kan., where he arrived in September, and had station, with occasional tours of field service, until June, 1876, when he moved by rail with a detachment of the regiment to Cheyenne, and participated in the Sioux campaign in Northern Wyoming, Dakota, and Montana, and was engaged in the affair at War Bonnet (Indian Creek), Wyo., and in the skirmishes at Slim Buttes, Dak. He was assigned, upon the disbandment of the expedition in October, to Fort D. A. Russell, where he had station until April, 1880, and was employed on field service in Northern Wyoming during the summer of 1877-78, in the capture of disaffected Indians at Ross Fork (Idaho) Agency in January, 1878, and in the Ute expedition during the fall and winter of 1879, and participated in raising the siege and action of Mill Creek, Col. He was transferred in April, 1880, to Fort Niobrara, in Northern Nebraska, where he has since served as a company, and at times as a post, commander.

For Dyspepsia, Mental and Physical Exhaustion, Nervousness, Diminished Vitality, etc.,

U S E

(LIQUID.)

Prepared according to the directions of Prof. E. N. Horsford, of Cambridge, Mass.

A PREPARATION OF THE PHOSPHATES OF LIME, MAGNESIA, POTASH, AND IRON WITH PHOSPHORIC ACID IN SUCH FORM AS TO BE READILY ASSIMILATED BY THE SYSTEM.

As Food for an Exhausted Brain,

In Liver and Kidney Trouble,

In Sea-Sickness and Sick Headache,

In Dyspepsia, Indigestion, and Constipation,

In Inebriety, Despondency, and Cases of Impaired Nerve Function,

HORSFORD'S ACID PHOSPHATE

Has become a necessity in a large number of households throughout the world, and is universally used by physicians of all schools.

It is not nauseous, but agreeable to the taste.

No danger can attend its use.

Its action will harmonize with such stimulants as are necessary to take.

IT MAKES A DELICIOUS DRINK,

With Water and Sugar only, and is an excellent substitute for Lemons or Limes.

We have received a very large number of letters from physicians of the highest standing, in all parts of the country, relating their experience with the Acid Phosphate, and speaking of it in high terms of commendation.

Horsford's Acid Phosphate is for sale by all druggists. Pamphlets mailed free on application.

Penn Mutual LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY

PURELY MUTUAL.

Of Philadelphia.

SECURITY is the first consideration, LOWEST COST the next. The "PENN" is unequalled in these essentials to first-class insurance.

The Policy contracts of this Company leave nothing to be desired, embracing all the liberal features of every other. They become INCONTESTABLE three years from date. They are absolutely NON-FORFEITABLE, the entire "reserve" at lapse being applied either to the EXTENSION of the original sum insured, or to the purchase of PAID-UP insurance, at the option of the member.

THE MANHATTAN

Though eleven months old only, is already recognized by the press on both sides of the Atlantic as one of the leading magazines of the country.

Its contributors have been, and will continue to be, among the best and most famous writers in the United States and Great Britain.

Among those who have contributed, or will contribute, to the magazine during the year 1883 are

JOHN G. WHITTIER,
DR. JAMES McCOSH,
JULIAN HAWTHORNE,
JOHN FISKE,
EDMUND C. STEDMAN,
ERNEST INGERSOLL,
RICHARD HENRY STODDARD,

LUCY H. HOOPER.

Its illustrations have constantly increased in value and importance, and some of the best known artists, both draughtsmen and engravers, in the country have been, or are now, engaged on work for its pages. It is now ranked as one of the leading illustrated monthlies of the United States. In typography, press-work, and paper, no pains or expense have been or will be spared.

The fascinating novel, "Beatrix Randolph," will be concluded in the December number.

In the November number is begun "Tinkling Cymbals," by Edgar Fawcett, a novel of Newport and New York society, which will run for six months.

The preparations for the year 1884 will make every number of that year a star number. The price of The Manhattan is $3.00 a year, in advance, postage free. 25 cts. a number.

To clubs of five persons, if sent all at once, the price is $2.50 a year, postage free, for each member of the club, with a copy gratis for a year to the person sending the club.

Subscribers may remit in postal notes, or in bank checks, or drafts, or by registered letters to Naval Battles, Ancient and Modern.

By EDWARD SHIPPEN,

Medical Director, United States Navy; Contributor to Hamersley's "Naval Encyclopedia," etc.

A Concise and Spirited History of the Most Celebrated Naval Engagements, from Salamis, B.C. 480, to the Bombardment of Alexandria, A.D. 1882.

"Dr. Shippen has written a very interesting book,—far more interesting than most histories, and, we may add, more valuable than a good many of them."—The Army and Navy Register, Washington, D.C.

"Men's imaginations will never cease to be fired by the story of Lepanto, the Invincible Armada, the Serapis and Bonhomme Richard, Trafalgar, the Monitor and Merrimac, and the many others equally noteworthy which Dr. Shippen tells in his interesting book."—The New York Observer.

The work is illustrated on an extensive and original scale. In addition to thirty tinted full-page pictures of Famous Battles, there are also thirty engravings of Galleys and War Vessels, showing the improvements and changes from the time of the Persians (500 B.C.) to A.D. 1882.

THE BEST SELLING BOOK OF THE SEASON. One agent took 136 orders in three weeks, another 39 in three days, another 30 in four days, another 40 in one week, etc.

THE GREAT BATTLES OF THE WORLD.

By Captain CHARLES KING, U.S.A.,

Author of "Winning His Spurs," etc.

"We have examined the work in manuscript, and can truly say that it is delightful reading, reflecting, as it does, not alone the author's graceful skill in composition, but his keen soldierly zest in battle-scenes as well. . . . From Marathon to Sedan, all the great conflicts that have been largely influential in setting up or overthrowing dynasties, in riveting the bonds of tyranny, or in winning independence for states and peoples, find place and treatment. . . ."—The United Service, for December, 1883.

A Vivid Portrayal of the Martial Deeds of Epaminondas, Alexander, Hannibal, Julius Caesar, Godfrey de Bouillon, Saladin, Richard Coeur de Lion, Joan of Arc, William the Conqueror, Gustavus Adolphus, Wallenstein, Frederick the Great, Napoleon, Grant, Lee, and a host of others of hardly less renown.

Fully Illustrated with Maps and Plans, Specimens of Arms and Armor, and the various Implements of Warfare from the Earliest Times, Pictures of Famous Battle-Scenes, etc.

Over 700 Pages. Prices: In Cloth. $3.00. Leather. $3.50.

From C. W. Hornish.

PEORIA, ILL.

Dr. SCOTT,—I have spent several hundred dollars in the city of Peoria, doctoring for kidney, liver, and nervous diseases during twelve years, but have received no permanent benefit. I have since worn one of Dr. Scott's Electric Belts, and am entirely cured. I have also found great relief from neuralgia in the use of his Hair Brush.

ELLIOTT CITY, MD.

Dr. SCOTT,—Your garments have been of more benefit to me during the past few months than all the medicine I have taken for years.

The Sun.

NEW YORK, 1884.

ABOUT sixty million copies of THE SUN have gone out of our establishment during the past twelve months.

If you were to paste end to end all the columns of all THE SUNS printed and sold last year you would get a continuous strip of interesting information, common-sense wisdom, sound doctrine, and sane wit long enough to reach from Printing House Square to the top of Mount Coper-nicus in the moon, then back to Printing House Square, and then three-quarters of the way back to the moon again.

But THE SUN is written for the inhabitants of the earth ; this same strip of intelligence would girdle the globe twenty-seven or twenty-eight times.

If every buyer of a copy of THE SUN during the past year has spent only one hour over it, and if his wife or his grandfather has spent another hour, this newspaper in 1883 has afforded the human race thirteen thousand years of steady reading night and day.

It is only by little calculations like these that you can form any idea of the circulation of the most popular of American newspapers, or of its influence on the opinions and actions of American men and women.

THE SUN is, and will continue to be, a newspaper which tells the truth without fear of consequences, which gets at the facts no matter how much the process costs, which presents the news of all the world without waste of words and in the most readable shape, which is working with all its heart for the cause of honest government, and which, therefore, believes that the Republican party must go, and must go in this coming year of our Lord, 1884.

If you know THE SUN, you like it already, and you will read it with accustomed diligence and profit during what is sure to be the most interesting year in its history. If you do not yet know THE SUN, it is high time to get into the sunshine.

ONE DOLLAR.

A MILITARY POCKET-BOOK.

By Brevet Major THOMAS WILHELM, U.S.A.

Imparts knowledge to the uninstructed. Refreshes knowledge previously acquired. Furnishes hints, formulæ, directions, and rules of procedure for almost every conceivable situation, exigency, or emergency incident to military service. Is always at hand, and can be consulted on the instant.

Is a complete summary and compendium of practical information on military topics, forming, in short, a library in itself which neither takes up room in quarters, nor constitutes an impediment on the march.

About 300 pages, 3 x 4 inches in size, printed on good paper, sprinkled edges, fully illustrated, bound in Russia leather, flexible covers.

We have reduced the price of the Pocket-Book to one dollar, and solicit your order at this low price.

LANDRETH'S PRIZE ESSAYS.

Our two pamphlets of Prize Essays, respectively on the culture of CELERY and ONIONS, comprise the experience and processes of experts in all sections of the land. The information they contain is worth ten times their cost of twenty-five cents each.

The attention of amateur gardeners is called to the fact that, with a slight exception, the Seeds offered by us are grown and saved entirely by ourselves, upon our own Seed Farms, and from our own stocks of PEDIGREE SEED, the result of many years' careful and intelligent selection, not the result of chance and careless purchases from parties who know nothing of the business of raising Seeds. We invite the attention of all who raise vegetables to the list of approved varieties which we offer. We have made Seed-growing a study, and give our customers the result of many years' close observation. Our long experience in Seed-raising has afforded us the best opportunity to comprehend, and realize to the fullest extent, the wants and necessities of all who grow vegetables for their own use, and we have made their supply a specialty.

Our experience dates almost from Colonial days, and we here give an extract from a letter received from one of our old customers:

"1792. When we write this note we cannot but think how long business relations have existed between our two houses. Our business was commenced in 1792, and during this entire period the Seed department has been supplied with Landreth's Seed, and from present indications we see no reason why it should not continue to be, as we think your Seeds are the best and most reliable in every respect."
